Bed Patients Tied, Beaten, Says Ex-Aide At Gallinger

2 Former Employes Declare Officials Appropriated Food, Other Property

By Anne Hagner
Post Staff Writer

Charges of extreme brutality to patients in the psychiatric ward at Gallinger Hospital will be answered today by Dr. Joseph Gilbert, physician in charge of the ward, who will testify at 10 a. m. before a Senate District subcommittee probing conditions at the institution.

Also serving as a witness will be Dr. Edgar A. Bocock, superintendent of the municipal hospital, against whom charges of misappropriation of hospital property were made by witnesses at the opening session yesterday on Capitol Hill.

Dr. George C. Ruhland, District Health officer, and other officials also are expected to appear today before the subcommittee.

"Bashed His Teeth"

Lawrence Tucker, 601 Massachusetts ave. ne., who was employed in the laundry at Gallinger for seven months, emerged as a surprise witness yesterday when he told Senator Bushfield (Republican) of South Dakota, who did the questioning, that "if a man patient in the psychiatric ward doesn't feel like going to bed, they tie him down and choke him unconscious."

"One man in the ward seems to get a big kick out of beating up patients," said Tucker, adding that he was under mental observation for a short time there and that he served a term at the District Reformatory at Lorton. "One patient whose hand was in a plaster cast broke open a case to get some cigarettes, so they choked him, strapped his hands and feet, and after he was tied up one of the other patients, a former convict like me—bashed his teeth in."

Claims Linen Was Stolen

Kenneth Orr, an orderly at the institution until late last February, said that "I have seen at least 12 employes of Dr. Bocock's farm come for free hospitalization."

"As late as the fall of 1942, I saw men in the kitchen putting 100-pound sacks of sugar and cuts of ham and other meats weighing 10 pounds or more into Dr. Bocock's automobile," Orr testified.

Dr. Bocock interrupted to ask if Orr actually had seen the contents

OPA Ends Hope For More Gas in East at Present

The Office of Price Administration declared yesterday that motorists in the Eastern shortage area should not expect more gasoline at present, but what the situation will be for the winter months depends upon the fourth quarter allotment which the Petroleum Administration for War expects to issue in the next few days.

OPA's statement was in response to reports that an order was "in the works" for increasing A rations from 1½ gallons a week to 2 gallons by shortening the valid period of the new gasoline coupons one month.

An OPA spokesman said that OPA district offices were advised several weeks ago that it might be possible to advance the date, but this order was countermanded when anticipated increases in shipments failed to materialize.

At PAW, a spokesman declared that Petroleum Administrator Harold L. Ickes is to inform OPA shortly as to how much gasoline can be made available to civilians in the fourth quarter.

Somervell New Chief of Staff?

Marshall May Become Allied Chieftain Today

The appointment of Gen. George C. Marshall, United States Army chief of staff, to be commander in chief of all Anglo-American armed forces, is expeteed to be announced within a matter of hours.

The announcement may come from President Roosevelt this afternoon. Mr. Roosevelt has a press conference scheduled for 4 p. m., his first since the question of General Marshall's future post came under intense public discussion, and is expected to have osmething to say on the subject.

It is understood that following the announcement of Marshall's selection as British-American generalissimo, he will be nominated as "General of the Armies" of the United States, a rank now only held by Gen. John J. Pershing, and equivalent to field marshal in other countries.

A sweeping reshuffling of the Army high command is expected to follow General Marshall's new appointment, although announcement of this move may be delayed.

Marshall, it is understood, will give up his post as Army chief of staff, and probably take up his headquarters overseas to take over personal direction of the assault on Nazi Europe.

His successor may not be named immediately, but is expected to be Lieut. Gen. Brehon B. Somerville, commanding general of the Army Service Forces. Lieut. Gen. Lesley

J. McNair, commanding general of the Army Ground Forces, is also mentioned in this connection.

Rep. Magnuson To Force FCC Showdown

To Protest Current Handling of House Investigation

by Edward Ryan
Post Staff Writer

Representative Magnuson (Democrat) of Washington, said yesterday he plans a vigorous protest against the current conduct of the House investigation into the Federal Communications Commission.

Magnuson, a member of the committee, served notice that he intends to force a showdown when the group meets today.

Representative Cox (Democrat) of Georgia, chairman of the committee, said the meeting had been called to discuss the future program, including continuance of hearings this week.

Far From Routine

It was apparent, however, the session would not be routine.

"I intend personally to inquire into the pattern of the investigation," said Magnuson, "and if it is what I believe it to be from reports, I shall vigorously protest against its continuation, or attempt to alter the pattern."

Magnuson added that his reports were that the committee and its staff had gone "very far afield from the original authority granted by Congress."

Could Not Return

He emphasized that he was relying on reports. He said he had left Washington last July with the understanding that no committee hearings would be held during the congressional summer recess. Ten days after reaching the West Coast, he said, he was informed the hear-

Rep. Taber Urges 10% Sales Levy

A 10 per cent Federal sales tax, coupled with rigid cutting of Government expenditures, was proposed yesterday by Representative Taber (Republican) of New York.

The proposal came shortly after the Ways and Means Committee had voted to tighten its hearing procedure in order to get a new tax bill through Congress by January 1.

Subscribing $740,110 worth of Third War Loan bonds at a rally last night, the U. S. War Bond and Stamp Council of the Wine and Liquor Industries brought its total bond purchases to $2,951,201.

The rally was held in the United States Chamber of Commerce.

After a program of speeches and music, the rally took the form of an auction at which relics from far flung battle fronts were "sold." One helmet from a 15 year old German killed in Africa finally brought $32,000 in bond purchases. A helmet from a slain Jap in the Aleutians brought $14,000.

Veterans Introduced

Introduced to the audience were: T. J. McGinnis, who was on the sunken USS Vincennes, and also with the convoy which escorted the Hornet on the mission to bomb Tokyo; Capt. William O'Hara, who was on a plane wrecked in Iceland; Pvt. Charles Goodman, who was wounded on Guadalcanal, and Pvt. H. Jubinville, who was injured in the African campaign.

Music was furnished by the Metropolitan Police Band, the Adrian Rollini trio, from El Patio, Don Lamong and Austin Mack, from the Troika and Corp. Jerry Pavelchek, who sang at the "Back the Attack" show.

Sergt. Robert Waldrop, who announced the "Back the Attack" show, acted as master of ceremonies.

Service Flag Day

Meanwhile the Capital today was asked to observe Capitol Service Flag Day, in honor of the 60,000 residents of the city who are now in the Armed Services by increased bond sales.

Sales as reported yesterday by the D. C. Finance Committee stood at $69,900,000 or 74.3 per cent of the District's 94-million-dollar goal. The national total yesterday, "Victory Fleet Day," stood at $13,805,000,000. With a little more than a

Capital's Death Rate Sinks To All-Time Low 1st War Year

By Elwin Stouffer

Washington's first war year, despite the increased population, ended with the lowest recorded death rate in the city's history the lowest infant mortality rate in "local experience" and a decided drop in communicable diseases, according to the annual report of the Health Department submitted yesterday to the District Commissioners.

The report, which is based on the 1942 calendar year, indicated that on the basis of an estimated mid-year population of 848,000 the death rate dropped to 10.8 per cent as compared with 11.8 per cent last year and 13.3 per cent in 1940.

The infant death rate was 44.8 per 1000 live births, the 1941 rate was 51.2. This indicated, the report said, that the health of mothers had in general been "excellent." Maternal deaths, per 1000 live births, amounted to 2.2, an all time low.

Deaths from tuberculosis during 1942 were also the lowest in the District's history. The mortality rate was 72.8 per 100,000 population, the previous year showed a death rate of 76.9.

Reporting on Gallinger Hospital the Health Department stated $22,000 was taken in during the year because of the changed policy of providing additional services for patients able to pay, an increase of approximately $9000 over the preceding year. During the year 14 new employes were added to the staff, this low number was ex-

Steady Fighting

Allied Headquarters in North Africa, Sept. 27.—Allied armies surged forward tonight along a 108-mile front across Italy to within striking distance of the great Foggia air base near the Adriatic and the key highway center of Avellino, possession of which would flank Naples to the east and unlock a new road into the demolished port city.

After a solid week of pounding from the American Fifth Army and Allied air might, the Germans retreated 10 miles in a critical mountain sector northeast of Salerno and the pursuing Yanks captured Cassano, 50 miles due east of Naples and 10 miles southeast of Avellino. The victory drove a deep salient into Nazi positions. The enemy resorted to rear guard retreat. Their artillery slackened in telltale defeat.

On the eastern end of the front, the British Eighth Army streamed across the Ofanto River at two points at least and burst onto the Foggia plains within 22 miles (the Cairo radio said 18) of that city with its 13 airfields. From these Allied bombers could easily reach all the Balkans.

Clark Striking Hard

Steadily mopping up Corsica, French troops and American Rangers drove in on the escape port of Bastia from the south and west through sharpt German patrol and artillery reaction. Considerable losses were inflicted on the Germans and prisoners were taken, a French communique said. The airport of Ghisonaccia, 44 miles south of Bastia, was abandoned by the Germans after they had demolished equipment and fuel. Other troops were within 7 miles of Bastia, where German flight from the island "is seriously hampered" by Allied planes. The enemy also was trying to escape from east of Borgo.

The admiralty announced in London that British submarines had sunk 10 vessels and damaged six others in attacks on Nazi forces attempting to withdraw troops and material by sea from Bastia.

Four small supply ships, a ferry and two landing craft were sunk by gunfire, and a large supply ship

Captive Reds Freed

By the Associated Press

London (Tuesday), Sept. 28.—The Red army captured an east bank suburb of Dnepropetrovsk in a savage hand-to-hand struggle across the river from that big steel city yesterday, smashed the last German Caucasian fortress of Temryuk, and swept up 1320 villages for the biggest day's haul of the war, Moscow disclosed early today.

Hurling German remnants into the Dnieper, the Russians seized the suburb of Nizhne-Dneprovsk and captured huge quantities of equipment the fleeing enemy was unable to remove to the west bank, said a communique recorded by the Soviet monitor.

At other points along the river "our troops, reaching the Dnieper, were wiping out or capturing individual German groupings on the left bank," it added.

Battle 50 Miles From Kiev

A Berlin broadcast also announced that night-striking Soviet troops, who had breasted the Dnieper 50 miles above Kiev in an apparent encircling movement on the Ukraine capital, still were battling the Germans on the west bank. Moscow was silent on this phase of the developing battle for Kiev.

While fighting raged along a 300-mile stretch of the river other Soviet armies in the north pressed on into White Russia, reaching a point only 22 miles from Gomel, whose fall was expected soon, and smashed ahead 9 miles beyond the fallen bastion of Smolensk.

Capture Russians Freed

The Soviet communique said that 25,000 Soviet civilians of one district who were being driven "to slave labor in Germany" were overtaken and freed, and hundreds of trucks, tractors, guns, and horses fell into Russian hands along with 25 locomotives and hundreds of freight cars. Scores of tanks were knocked out or captured.

Nearly 7000 Germans were killed during the day, the bulletin said. Two thousand fell before the Russian columns pouring toward Mogilev ,above Gomel. Entire battalions were wiped out in bitter fighting around the Dnieper River City of Kremenchug, where both sides threw in their air forces.

The Army Warns

Foe Held Tougher Now Than at War's Start

John G. Norris

American military chiefs said yesterday that the armies and air forces of Germany and Japan now are larger than before the war and that there is no prospect of an early collapse of either enemy.

Hitler, however, has given up hope of victory and is waging a desperate defense aiming for a stalemate, they said.

This was the sobering picture presented by War Department officials to the Nation's "civilian general staff" — the conference of some 200 industry, labor and newspaper leaders which opened here yesterday.

An analysis of the military strength of the enemy, given by Maj. Gen. George V. Strong, Army Intelligence chief, portrayed the Axis as still powerful and weakened only slightly by the surrender of Italy.

Later, Undersecretary of War Robert P. Patterson said that off-the-record statements made to the group by Gen. George C. Marshall, Army chief of staff, and Gen. Henry H. Arnold, chief of the Army Air Forces, bore out Strong's view that "we have a long way to go before this war is won."

Summing up the first day's session of the conference, Patterson said the Army leaders "left no doubt that our recent victories have failed to affect in any vital degree the strength of the enemy."

Generals Marshall, Arnold and Strong, said Patterson, "pointed out that we are far from the heart of Germany or the heart of Japan, and that both Axis nations have bigger armies today than they had at the start of the war."

"There is no reason to believe that either is in imminent danger of collapse because of slack morale or economic stringency," he added. "On the contrary, there is every reason to believe that exactly the opposite is true.

"To be sure of victory, we must throw everything we have into this fight, and we must not relax our efforts until the last enemy has

Held on Ship At Gunpoint, Curran Says

By the Associated Press

New York, Sept. 27.—Joseph Curran, president of the National Maritime Union (CIO), charged today that a security officer aboard his ship said he had an order to prevent the union leader from going ashore at North Africa and that he was told "I would be shot if I tried."

Back from a six-week trip as an able-bodied seaman, Curran, announcing his union would appeal his 1-A draft reclassification, said the State Department had done all in its power to block his mission to study maritime conditions abroad.

"When we arrived at a North African port every member of the crew was given shore leave with one exception—Joseph Curran," he said. "I was informed that by order of the State Department' I was not permitted to go ashore. I was also informed that if I descended the gangplank I would be shot and there were soldiers with Tommyguns there, ready to do the shooting."

The NMU chieftain said that when he decided to go to Great Britain, Soviet Russia and North Africa to study maritime conditions for the union, "the State Department first delayed, then stalled on my application for a passport, so I shipped out on my seaman's passport as a worker-member of the crew."

"All I can think is that some interests in the State Department did not want me to see the conditions I went to investigate," he said.

Referring to his Selective Service status, Curran said:

"All I can say is that I never knowingly violated the Selective Service laws. My employer, the

Extra Gas Tanks Enable Fighters To Escort 'Forts' To Emden Target

By the Associated Press

London, Sept. 27.—Swift P-47 Thunderbolts carrying long-range fuel tanks made aerial history today when they ran interference in an 800-mile roundtrip for Flying Fortresses which blasted the German North Sea naval base at Emden and the nearby city of Aurich.

Allied airmen in these operations and day-long sweeps over the Continent which saw three Nazi airfields and a railway center pounded, shot down 58 German fighter planes—18 by Flying Fortresses, 22 by Thunderbolts, 4 by Marauuders and 14 by RAF, Dominion and Allied fighters.

The Berlin radio suddenly went off the air late tonight, indicating the RAF was keeping up the assault which the Nazis had been told only the weather would interrupt.

From all operations, seven heavy bombers, one medium bomber and seven fighters were missing.

A communique said strong Fortresses of the U. S. Eighth Air Force attacked installations at Emden and targets at Aurich, 14 miles to the northeast.

Airfields Blasted

Marauders blasted the airfields at Beauvais-Tille and Conches, Mitchell bombers raided the railway center at Rouen-Scotteville, 60 miles northwest of Paris, and Typhoons bombed an air field at Abbeville-Drucat, 90 miles northwest of Paris.

The unprecedented performance of the Thunderbolts which had the extra tanks fixed to their bellies—a success story like that of the Flying Fortresses which pioneered in high-altitude daylight bombing—surprised the Germans so that returning airmen reported only light opposition.

One of War's Greatest

One London newspaper described the attack on Emden as "the greatest daylight raid of the war," with thousands of tons of bombs thrown down by nearly 500 planes.

Eighth Air Force headquarters described these figures as "completely unauthorized."

It was later learned the raid was not the largest by the USAAF although it was in heavy force.

For more than a half hour the Fortresses rained down explosives, incendiaries and pamphlets, but poor visibility prevented accurate observation of results, Eighth Air Force headquarters said.

"Our bombardiers dropped their bombs through nine-tenths cloud," said Brig. Gen. Fred L. Anderson, wing commander. "The splendid fighter support over the target given by P-47 Thunderbolts undoubtedly accounted for the low loss figure."

The Germans sent up the usual swarms of fighters to meet the first Forts, but reports from returning fliers indicated that only a

Compromise Weighed

By Robert C. Albright

Headed for almost certain defeat or recommittal, the Wheeler no-father-draft bill will be called up in the Senate today for debate and a probable showdown decision within the next 72 hours.

Substitute moves, to purge Government offices of ablebodied, military-age, childless men and to call younger fathers first, gained unexpected strength as the Senate test neared.

The Wheeler bill itself, flatly blocking any call of fathers for three months, appeared definitely on the skids. Most that advocates of the bill apparently could hope for was some ameliorating move on the part of the Administration. Talk of such a compromise persisted, but could not be substantiated in any leadership quarter.

Leaders favored a vote at the earliest possible moment, certainly

Local Officials Can't Fix Exact Date for Call

Pre-Pearl Harbor fathers will not be drafted in the District during October because a sufficient number of men in other classifications can be called, District Selective Service headquarters announced yesterday.

The fathers may be called here in November, although officials said they would not predict at what time during the month the need would arise. Selective Service boards throughout the country may start induction of pre-Pearl Harbor fathers Friday if other classifications have been exhausted, but boards here have reported that men may be drawn from several other groups.

Throughout the next month, local boards will draw on their supply of men whose occupational deferments have expired and will not be renewed; others with wives only, single men with collateral dependents, and those who recently have reached 18 years of age.

An inventory of men of all classifications is drawing to a close and final results are expected by Thursday. A check has been made on all deferments prior to the call for pre-Pearl Harbor fathers, set for October 1 by Maj. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, National Selective Service head.

Corn, Snap Bean Points Cut As Luxury Canned Foods Rise

By Christine Sadler
Post Staff Writer

New ration point values for processed fruits and vegetables, to go into effect October 3, will be lower for snapbeans and corn, but higher for asparagus, mushrooms and seven canned fruits.

Dried peas and lentils will be removed from rationing, upon recommendation of the War Food Administration, which declared the 1943 crops of these foods the greatest on record.

When announcing the new points, OPA said reductions made for snapbeans and corn of two and three points, respectively, would outweigh increases made for fruits since these two commodities are so widely used.

Asparagus was raised four points on the average-sized can, while mushrooms went up two points. These foods, classified "luxury" by OPA, have been moving too rapidly, it was stated.

Red sour cherries went up 11 points on an average can, figs up 8, grapefruit up 8, plums and prunes up 8, apricots up 9, other cherries up 9, and grapefruit up 3.

All increases except for grapefruit reflect short crops, and this was attributed to the channeling of grapes into jelly and jam factories—to provide spreads for breads and rolls, which will figure extensively in the new "war diet."

Meantime, it was revealed OPA officials are concerned about "pressures" against the price ceilings on bread and have faced the conclu-and two small supply ships were sunk by torpedoes, the announcement said. Two landing craft and a small auxiliary vessel were declared damaged by gunfire, and a small supply ship and two large tankers were destroyed, one of the tankers subsequently being beached.

In eastern Italy, the Eighth Army dashed north along the Adriatic coastal road to seize the important salt manufacturing city of Margherita di Savoia and the inland town of Cerignola.

Apparently resigned to the loss of Foggia (population, 62,340), the Germans concentrated practically all their combat troops in southern Italy against Lieut. Gen. Mark W. Clark's Fifth Army, which was striking frontally and on the right flank of Naples. This left the Eighth Army free to advance as rapidly as it could bring up supplies and overcome road demolitions.

The only contact Gen. Sir Bernard L. Montgomery reported with the enemy was north of captured Atella in the center. The German command appeared to be confronted with the alternative either of pulling back this force or having it enveloped by a British move inland from the direction of Cerignola.

In strong contrast with the almost complete absence of opposition on the Eighth Army front, British units of the Fifth Army were locked in a toe-to-toe slugging match with strong German forces on the extreme western end of the front, immediately north and northwest of Salerno.

Most Ferocious Yet

A military spokesman called this battle phase near the sea the most ferocious fought by any Allied troops in the Mediterranean since the Egyptian battle of El Alamein nearly a year ago. The British stormed and took "limited objectives" in the mountains. They still had 4 miles to go before breaking into open ground on the road to Naples.

London reported the British navy had intervened, shelling the Germans along with land batteries of 25-pounders and American Long Tom 155-mm. cannon.

The threat to Avellino from the capture of Cassano imperiled the whole German defense of Naples. Major roads radiate from Avellino (population 29,091) in almost every direction. The town is athwart an important road of retreat northward for enemy forces now holding lines north of Salerno. If that route is cut, the enemy would be compelled to pull back to the northwest through or near Naples where communications already have been badly shattered.

The Fifth Army also drove 10 miles up the Sele River to capture Calabritto, mountain town of 27 miles east of Salerno, just north of Valva. In the center, Muro fell, 38 miles due east of Salerno and 18 miles northwest of Potenza.

Unfavorable weather (perhaps the start of the Italian rainy season) limited air activity.

Other Points Bombed

At the southeast foot of Mount Vesuvius, enemy concentrations were bombed south of Sarno. Road junctions at Benevento and Colle, northeast of Naples, were bombed. The Pomigliano d'Arco airdrome outside Naples was hammered.

Middle East bombers struck the Kalamaki airdrome near the Greek capital of Athens and left a ship sinking in the Syros Harbor in the Aegean. One Middle East bomber was lost but Allied planes returned from Italian operations. Enemy activity aloft was negligible.

A headquarters announcement said 244 intact or slightly damaged Axis planes had been seized in Italy, 77 at Montecorvino-Ravella, 64 at Vibo Valentia and 103 near Taranto.

"Motor transport north of Foggia was attacked," General Eisenhower's communique said, suggesting the Germans were continuing to retreat from that city and its web of airfields.

Foggia is 45 miles from Vienna, 500 from Munich and 580 from the Ploesti oil fields of Rumania.

Field of Cannae Overrun

In beating toward the city, the British overran without combat the ancient battlefield of Cannae on the Oranto, where Hannibal in 216 B. C. disastrously defeated the Romans and annihilated their army.

Clark's advance left the Salerno Plain far behind and overran mountain positions dominating the elaborate network of highways leading to Avellino.

Front dispatches said the ten-mile gain was made by troops who fought steadily for seven days and frequently at night.

The Fifth Army was strengthening avenues of supply before its next big push.

Along the direct approaches to Naples west of Vesuvius, the Germans were so well entrenched that flanking movements were impossible. British units of the Fifth Army had to root out machine-gun nests meticulously, one by one, and it was bloody business.

nese air reinforcement base of Wewak was pounded by 23 tons of bombs, today's communique said.

At Hasna Bay, midway between Wewak and Madang, 22 tons of bombs were dropped by Allied raiders on supply dumps and bivouac areas.

Four-engined bombers were escorted by fighters in their attack on two airdromes. Twenty Japanese fighters intercepted and three were shot down. The raiders sustained no losses.

Their explosives set fires visible for 30 miles. Direct hits were scored among six parked planes at Dagua.

At Wewak, more than 400 enemy planes have been destroyed since mid-August, effectively weakening Japanese air resistance to the Allied land offensive.

London May Get Tripartite Parley If Hull Attends

New York Herald-Tribune Bureau

The meeting of Foreign Ministers of the United States, Great Britain and Soviet Russia which has been scheduled tentatively for Moscow will possibly be changed to London, it was learned yesterday, in consideration of the fact that Cordell Hull, Secretary of State, has decided to make the trip.

London was favored originally by the British and American Governments as the midway point to which American and Soviet Ministers could conveniently travel. But when it was believed that Hull would not make the trip personally Soviet preference for Moscow was acceded to. Now, however, the situation is believed to have undergone a change and the original plan reinstated.

Hull has gone to Hot Springs, Va., where he is resting up a week or more before undertaking his strenuous task.

7 Raft Sitters Wait for Oregon To Buy War Bonds

Portland, Oreg., Sept. 27 (AP).—What started out as a light-hearted publicity stunt was grim reality today for seven raft-sitters in Portland Harbor.

They jumped onto a Navy raft in the Willamette River, pledging to get along on shipwreck rations until Oregon filled its 104-million-dollar quota in the Third War Loan campaign.

Now, 10 days later, Oregon has raised only 62 per cent of the quota and the Coast Guard has taken a literal attitude about simulating shipwreck conditions.

The men are down to their last two days of chocolate rations, and are eating only two meals a day of what other rations remain. They told reporters they were "tired, hungry and cold." The Coast Guard not only has refused them additional food, but also blankets, long underwear and soap.

Unless bond sales spurt, the men won't be rescued until the Third War Loan campaign ends Saturday.

Marshall May Get New Post Today

Conference of Industry, Labor and Newspaper Leaders which opened yesterday.

Styer was listed as "commanding, Army Service Forces," the post Somervell has held since before the war. An Army spokesman said it was a mistake, however, that General Styer is acting commander of the ASF.

Reports that General Marshall was to leave his present post and take over field command aroused protest in some quarters that he was being "kicked upstairs." Some members of Congress and columnists charged he was being moved because of opposition to him by "powerful interests" identified variously as the British and some New Dealers.

Actually, the situation is that President Roosevelt is promoting General Marshall to take the fullest advantage of his great ability.

His job over here of building, training and equipping a powerful American Army and making global war plans is largely in hand. The post of chief of staff henceforth will be mainly one of supplying the fighting fronts with troops and equipment. Strategic plans drawn up by the Joint and Combined Chiefs of Staff—of which he is a member—presumably are largely determined.

The big task ahead is of carrying out those plans with the Army in being—the assignment Marshall is to be given.

Allies Down 58 Nazi Craft In Emden Raid

small proportion of the enemy pilots were willing to tangle with the P-47s and Fortresses.

"Jerry must know the jig is up when P-47s can go that far," said one pilot.

The range of single-engined fighters had always been considered limited by fuel loads. The normal range of the Spitfire, Britain's standard fighter, is only about 500 miles.

Can Jettison Extra Tanks

The Thunderbolts overcame the limitation with a powerful 18-cylinder engine supplying all the power a four-bladed propeller can absorb to lift the extra gasoline load in light composition tanks. These tanks can be jettisoned as soon as they are empty or when the pilots need more speed for fighting.

Today's success indicates the Fortresses possibly can double the scope of penetrations into Germany with the same iron-clad escort that has confounded the Nazis on shorter forays into France.

The Emden attack—the third for the Fortresses since May on Germany's naval base nearest to Britain and big port for the entry of Scandinavian ore to the Ruhr war factories—carried the US Eighth Air Force across the line to a new record month's operations.

July Mark Equalled

With three days of the month to go, the Fortresses' second raid in two days brought the September total to 10 to equal the high mark set in July. US Maurauder mediums, which made only five raids in July, ticked off their twentieth this month with another attack on the Nazis' Beauvais-Tille air base, 45 miles from Paris. The Marauders were escorted to the target by Thunderbolts and RAF Spitfires.

The French airfield at Conches also was raided by Marauders, escorted by Spitfires, this afternoon, it was announced.

The Beauvais-Tille attack marked the eighth pounding of the field this month by Allied bombers in the incessant drive against the German air force's ground installations.

Overnight, RAF Mosquitos kept the Allied day-and-night campaign going with attacks on the Rhineland.

Typhoons and Typhoon bombers sank a tug and a barge today and damaged eight other vessels in Holland's two Schelde estuaries.

Reporting the operation, the Air Ministry news service said enemy antiaircraft fire exploded one of the aircraft's ammunition containers, but the pilot brought his plane home safely.

When the Thunderbolts made their debut last spring, they were immediately criticized by some observers as inferior to the Spitfires and Focke Wulfs in maneuverability and other points.

The Thunderbolts were being developed as specialized, high-altitude (up to 40,000 feet) and long-range fighters.

They have had notable success escorting the Fortresses shorter distances and accompanying the Marauders on almost daily raids for over two months in the course of which only a dozen bombers were lost.

A month ago, Gen. Henry H. Arnold, chief of the Army Air Forces, was able to state categorically that the Thunderbolt had proved itself better than the Spitfire for the purposes of our bomber escorts and today's operation demonstrated its long-range capabilities.

Russians Capture Last Stronghold of Germans Caucasus their fighting for Dnieper River crossings, but ranged ahead to blow up German troop trains and rail junctions west of the river.

German troops by the hundreds were surrendering under the impact of the Soviet armies, Moscow said, 400 of them being taken in a "daring outflanking maneuver" which forced an estuary at Temryuk in the Caucasus and "cut off the retreat of the enemy."

Kiev itself was reported under Soviet artillery fire from the lower east bank, and there were indications that the Germans were evacuating some personnel there.

Railway Junction Taken

Plunging into White Russia to the north, the Russians were declared to have captured Terekhovka, only 22 miles southeast of Gomel, southern junction of the Mogilev-Orsha-Vitebsk railway, the last north-south line left to the Germans in that part of western Russia opposite the old Polish border.

The fall of Temryuk foreshadowed the flight of all German troops from the last Axis foothold in the northwestern Caucasus opposite the Crimea. The Russians were within 20 miles of the tip of the Aaman Peninsula after capturing Blagovyeshchenskaya, 20 miles below the Sea of Azov port on the opposite side of the peninsula.

Russians Cross Dnieper

Capt. Ludwig Sertorius, Berlin military commentator, said the Russians already had crossed the Dnieper at several points, and also admitted not all of them had been hurled back.

"These Soviet detachments," he said, "either were wiped out in immediate German counter-thrusts or else thrown back across the river, or at least hemmed in on a very narrow space in the immediate vicinity of the river."

He said the Russians were making "extensive use of parachutists and air-borne troops," and that the Russians were not so much interested in crushing German bridgeheads on the east bank of the Dnieper as in crossing to the west shore and establishing their own bridgeheads "at as many points as possible."

This Soviet infiltration to the west bank, he hinted, extended all the way from the Zaporozhe sector below Dnepropetrovsk to the confluence of the Pripet and Dnieper Rivers above Kiev.

Attempt to Collapse Line

On the east bank opposite Kiev, Sertorius said, the situation was static. He said he believed the Russians would not try frontal assaults, but would seek to collapse the entire German Dnieper line by cracking the northern and southern ends.

The Nazi commentator said a furious fight raged between the Sea of Azov and Zaporozhe.

The Soviet armies were moving with such speed they threatened to crush both wings of the long German defenses, and the Nazis might have to fall back to the old Polish and Rumanian borders.

The Germans apparently were hoping that the fall rains would bog down the Russians.

Payrolls Handled with Less Labor
—Saving precious office time

WAR gets management back to fundamentals—that output is mainly man-hours—expense largely wage-hours; and that, when workers are too few for what must be done, TIME must be stretched.

That's why every method or suggestion that saves time—at a reaper, a desk, a lathe, a billing machine—saves workers from overtime, builds up profits, helps win the war.

▲ FOR INSTANCE—this week many offices will produce today's complex payroll records in one-half the time formerly consumed. This despite the new "load" added by the Withholding Tax.

▲ THE REASON—a new payroll plan by Shaw-Walker automatically transfers each figure to the several essential records.

After writing payroll figures just once, every record needed is completed, correct and up-to-date—ready for quarterly reports and government inspection. Rewriting of figures is entirely eliminated.

Entirely eliminated, too, are separate records for War Bonds, Social Security, Withholding Tax, employee insurance, employee hospitalization, union dues and all other ledger records of a similar nature.

Every pay day the statement you give to each employee includes:

(1) A complete record of earnings.

(2) A detailed list of deductions.

(3) A notice telling the worker the exact amount he has on deposit with you toward his next War Bond.

ALL MADE AT ONE WRITING: pay checks, employee pay statement, social security and withholding tax record, War Bond Record, ledger record of other deductions, check register and payroll summary.

▲ SO SIMPLE is the "KOPI-SPOT" payroll system that any clerk can handle it. It can be adapted to any type of payroll whether you pay by check or in cash—whether you make your entries by typewriter or by hand.

▲ A COMPLETE FOLDER has been prepared, illustrating the "KOPI-SPOT" and explaining its application to various payroll methods. May we send you a copy of it?

FOR THE DURATION any old file will do—it's the system itself that counts!

AFTER THE WAR transfer the system intact to any of the following:

A SHAW-WALKER FIRE FILE—the steel file with built-in fire protection. It gives safe-like security, even in severe fires.

OR THE DRAWERS of the Shaw-Walker steel desk. This is the famous new low desk for comfort and hard work.

Mussolini Again In Italy, Nazis Say

Axis Spokesmen Declare Allies Will Never Conquer Europe, Enslave People

By the Associated Press

London, Sept. 27.—The Nazis, striving to fill Italy's vacant chair at the table where the tripartite treaty was signed, celebrated the third anniversary of that pact by broadcasting today that Benito Mussolini had returned to Italy.

Berlin quoted Il Duce as saying: "I deem it a good sign that my return to Italy coincides with the anniversary of the pact that binds together indissolubly Fascist Italy, National Socialist Germany and the empire of the Japanese Emperor."

The statement came simultaneously with whistling-in-the-dark addresses by Japanese Foreign Minister Mamoru Shigemitsu and German Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop, who drummed away on the familiar charge that the United States, Britain and Russia "want to conquer Europe to enslave its population."

"The Bolshevists and Anglo-Americans shall never conquer Europe nor will they ever deprive Japan of her possessions in the East," Mussolini said.

"The Republican Fascist government is determined to fight to final victory with all its strength and with the confidence which has always inspired Italy.

"The episode which was created by an international clique in collaboration with some traitors has had consequences which will be decisive for the future of the war because Italy can now obtain some idea of the ruin which threatened her.

"Republican Fascist Italy will wipe these days of humiliation out of her history and with her blood will extinguish the shame which a degenerate monarch tried to bring upon his country's traditions and glorious past."

Says Pact Is Unbroken

Shigemitsu joined in insisting that "the Axis pact remains unbroken" despite Badoglio's "treachery," and said the Axis powers would triumph in reaching their joint goal, "the achievement of justice in the world."

Without specifying where, he said "at present we are counter-attacking and are resolved to continue the battle until final victory. On all fronts of Greater East Asia, Japan deals severe blows to the enemy.

"With the help of Russian armored divisions," Ribbentrop said, "Europe was to be incorporated in the Soviet Union.

"We should fight and fight again until clear vision arrives."

Satellites Warned

One Berlin broadcast warned Axis satellites not to follow Badoglio's lead, saying:

"Any nation which today believes it is able to steer its small national or private ship safe and sound through the waves of world tempest will have to pay for it severely some day."

Last year at this time Field Marshal Erwin Rommel stood menacingly upon the final approaches to Alexandria, the German summer campaign had ended with the big gains in Russia, and the Japanese had reached their high tide in the Pacific and Indian Ocean theaters.

It was in the two months following—October and November, respectively—that Gen. Sir Bernard Montgomery set out upon the long road back from Egypt and the Allies landed in North Africa.

China Parliament Has Clash With Communist Party

Chungking, Sept. 27 (AP).—Strained relations between Chinese Communists and President Chiang Kai-shek's Nationalist Party flared openly today when China's embryonic Parliament, the peoples' political council, accused the Communists of "a disobedient attitude and subversive activities."

Each party capital—Chungking, and Yenan in Shensi Province—has frequently accused the other of disrupting the national unity and hindering the prosecution of the war against Japan.

The council resolution urged the Reds to abandon the Communist movement, dissolve their "Soviet organization," and disband the Red army by incorporating it into the National army.

Yugoslavs Capture Savnik, Sandwiching German Forces

By the Associated Press

London, Sept. 27.—The Yugoslav liberation army, broadcasting a special communique heard by Yugoslav listeners in London, announced tonight the capture of Savnik, in the hills of Montenegro 50 miles from the Adriatic Sea coast.

Already holding Zadljak, the mountaineers now menace the big German garrison at Niksic, 15 miles to the southwest, besides commanding communications between German bases in the interior.

The German forces in Montenegro now are sandwiched between the mountain forces and guerillas holding a long coastal area.

Bitter fighting continued at Sinj to the north, where Germans and Ustachis who attempted to recapture Split now were reported on the defensive and suffering heavy losses. The Yugoslavs found revenge in this fighting, for the Prinz Eugen Division, once hailed by Hitler as having crushed opposition in this area, was said to have been badly defeated in a clash on the Cetina River near Sinj.

The war bulletin said the struggle for control of Susak, adjoining Fiume, continued indecisively.

No new mention was made of operations in the Trieste area.

Upward of 50,000 Italians, with stores of arms and munitions, were said to have joined their former foes to smash their former Allies. Italian forces aiding Croat guerillas were reported to have wiped out a German military camp near Bihac.

London Sees Nazis' Russian Power Sapped

By the Associated Press

London, Sept. 27.—General opinion in London is that the Germans never again will be able to launch a major attack in Russia, and now are fighting only to avoid destruction of the army and to protect the fatherland from invasion.

This opinion is founded mainly on the fact that the Nazis are running increasingly short of manpower along the 1100-mile front. The situation is viewed as markedly different from 1918 in France, when the Germans were able to overcome a manpower deficiency and resume their attacks by shortening their lines.

Advance to Continue

It also is believed that if the Russians force the German defenses along the Dnieper River, their advance will continue steadily, perhaps even at the recent pace of 100 miles a month.

The River Bug, which extends parallel to and about 75 miles east of the old Bessarabian border to the Black Sea, is seen as the next Nazi defense line if the Russian advance continues on across the Dnieper, with the Dniester River, which forms the old Bessarbin border, as the second defense line and the Curzon Line in Poland as the last defense.

While it is remarked in London that the German retreat has been orderly, it is felt that even the most fanatic Nazis must come to the realization that an endless retreat is hopeless.

Question of Defenses

The question whether the retreat can be halted has been raised by the dubiousness of German defenses behind the Dnieper.

They are not believed to have been long or well prepared, and the Pripet Marshes, which form a part of the defenses, instead of being a barrier, would afford an open, frozen plain for tank combat during the winter.

Rains May Not Halt Fighting in Russia

Bern, Switzerland, Sept. 27 (AP). Berlin dispatches to Stockholm indicated that intensive fighting might continue on the Russian front in spite of heavy fall rains. Nya Dagligt Allehanda's correspondent wrote that both Russians and Germans now are equipped with newly developed tanks, assault cars and other vehicles which can be navigated through flooded fields, small streams and mud.

The Russian victories are stirring the Balkans, where both Rumania and Hungary are fearful of the fate of their troops. Hungary was reported today to have withdrawn its troops in the Kiev sector by agreement with Hitler.

War Sidelights

Nazis Bar Food in Milan to All but Workers

At the Swiss-Italian Frontier, Sept. 27 (AP).—Nazi authorities in Milan announced today that only those who resume work will receive food rations.

A proclamation said the populace was invited to return to work and maintain discipline. Those who do not will get no food, and those disturbing order will be sentenced by a military court.

(The Nazi-controlled Italian radio said Monday that German Field Mrshl Albeart Kesselring has demanded the surrender of all Italian motor vehicles—with "the drivers," if possible.)

Mt. Cenis Tunnel Blocked

New York, Sept. 27 (AP).—The British Broadcasting Corp. said today that "latest reports" showed the 8½-mile-long Mount Cenis tunnel through the Alps, main railroad link between France and Italy, was still blocked after being blown up by the Italians, and "will be out of order for several months"

The BBC added that railroad communication from Yugoslavia to Italy via East Venice also was broken as a result of action by Slovenian Patriots operating "on both sides of the Italian-Yugoslav border."

Nazi Dodecanese Raid

London, Sept. 27 (AP).—The Berlin radio said today that waves of heavy German fighter and bomber planes had raided Lero Island in the Dodecanese, which it said the British were attempting to make into a strong Allied eastern Mediterranean base.

The Nazis claimed their raiders sank a 5000-ton transport with a loss of some of the troops aboard, left a 9000-ton freighter sinking, set three small vessels ablaze and burned oil dumps.

Vatican Safe, Nazis Say

Bern, Switzerland, Sept. 27 (AP). The Germans in Rome have issued an official declaration saying, in effect, that all is well in the Holy City.

German troops, watching the demarcation line between the Vatican and Italian territory, it was said, are required to see that no enemy national crosses into the Vatican. Nothing has occurred which would lead to a protest between the Vatican and the German Legation, it added. The Basilica of St. Peter's has remained closed, but all other churches in Rome are open. The Catholic paper Avvenire was quoted as saying Vatican City had not been encircled by artillery and likewise as denying that German soldiers were plundering churches.

Father Draft Bill to Reach Senate Today

by Friday's slated start of the father draft, whisking the bill and all amendments back to committee for pigeonhole burial.

Surprise strength of two amendment moves left the way open for possible passage of a substitute measure.

These were:

1. Amendments sponsored jointly by Senators Bailey of North Carolina and Clark of Missouri, designed to clear the Washington military and Federal service of 18 to 28-year-old physically fit males whose assignment to desk duty is not certified as essential.

Would Call Young Fathers

2. A substitute by Senator Taft, (Republican), of Ohio requiring Selective Service to call fathers under 30 years of age ahead of older heads of families.

Senator Taft said he would press for a vote on his plan regardless of what happens to the Wheeler bill. At least two other moves to call up fathers by age groups meanwhile were in the making. Senator Bridges (Republican) of New Hampshire proposed that fathers under 23 be the first to go, "because they make better soldiers and have smaller families to support." Senator Clark proposed fathers be called in three age groups, with those under 25 inducted first.

At recent Military Committee hearings, Maj. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, Selective Service director, estimated that Taft's plan would exhaust the list of available fathers under 30 by January 1 and that older fathers must of necessity be called later.

Senator Bailey released a copy of the "Bailey-Clark" amendment to induct all childless males that can be spared from the Government service and take as many armed service nonfathers as possible out of desk jobs. Senator Wheeler (Democrat), Montana, is expected to claim the floor at the outset of the debate, but Bailey said he will ask Wheeler to yield him time to introduce his amendment.

Bailey's restriction on armed service assignments in Washington provides that no man between 18 and 38 serving as a commissioned officer in the land or naval forces shall be stationed on duty in Washington or Arlington County for longer than 30 days in any calendar year unless:

1. He was married prior to December 8, 1941, and has a child or children under 18 years old; or

2. Such a man is physically disqualified for active combat service; or

3. His services are required here by the Secretaries of War or Navy, as indispensable to the operations of the land or naval forces.

Similarly, Bailey's provision for induction of childless Government males specifies:

"No registrant between the ages of 18 and 38 shall be permitted to occupy or continue to be employed in or be appointed to any civilian position in or under the Federal Government unless (a) such registrant was married prior to December 6, 1941, and has a child or children under 18 years of age, or (b) such registrant is deferred from training and service by reason of physical disqualification or has been honorably discharged from the land or naval forces, or (c) the services of such registrant in such position are certified by the head of the department or agency within which such registrant is employed or appointed to be indispensable to the operations of such department or agency."

The Bailey-Clark amendment also provides that any certification that a man is indispensable shall contain a statement of the reasons he is indispensable, and that a copy be transmitted to Congress within 30 days of certification.

sion a subsidy of between 60 and 100 million dollars would be needed to keep the bread loaf from rising 1 cent in price next year.

An immediate rise in the price of bread to consumers will come October 1 when the entire Nation starts to eat enriched bread and rolls. This boost to the cost of living, however, may come without obvious OPA sanction, as a differential already exists between enriched and unenriched bread—and the latter food will just disappear from the market. Makers of enriched flour have been granted an additional 7 per cent increase in their ceilings to cover costs of adding more vitamins and minerals than heretofore required even in "enriched" loaves. This will necessitate no bread-cost raise "at this time," OPA declared.

The subsidy problem will have to be faced when wheat farmers no longer receive parity payments from the Government. These payments were dropped by Congress in the last farm appropriations act but will be paid on crops harvested this year. Winter wheat, however, and 1944 crops will not have this support. OPA cannot place a ceiling below farm parity—which means increases next year for wheat, corn, cotton, corn, tobacco, and rice.

In place of a subsidy for flour or wheat, the Administration may ask Congress to make a deficiency appropriation covering the parity payments.

War Food Administrator Marvin Jones in his appearance before the House Banking Committee this week will ask that the life of the Commodity Credit Corporation be extended for 18 months and its funds increased a half billion dollars.

This sum will not be sufficient, it was declared yesterday, to cover the subsidy for bread—and bread will not be one of the foods discussed by him, according to present plans.

Milk Subsidy Plan Supported by UFW

The United Federal Workers (CIO), representing members in 15 Government agencies here, yesterday announced support of the proposed three-month subsidy program for milk producers, as a measure to prevent milk price increases.

A UFW delegation to Leon Steck, chairman of the Dairy and Poultry Division of the War Food Administration, declared that any increase in the cost of the commodity would fall most heavily on those least able to pay, including Government workers whose wages are fixed by law. It would, in effect, be a violation of the President's "hold the line" order, the delegation chairman told Steck.

Republic 8488

A huge 4-engine Liberator Express—transport version of the long-range Liberator bomber—takes aboard tons of military freight for delivery to foreign bases.

SNOWPLOWS IN THE SKY

THIS IS A STORY you won't find mentioned in today's war communiques.

In fact, it's a story that cannot be told in full until after the war—not without endangering the lives of men and revealing military strategy.

But the War Department has permitted us to tell the facts you'll find below.

These dramatic incidents, picked from the flight logs of Liberator Express transport planes, merely hint at the magnificent job being done by the pilots and crews of the Army's Air Transport Command.

Day after day, on routine clock-like schedules, these men are flying our global skyways with tons of vital military supplies for our world-based fighting forces.

For example, they've flown . . .

Snowplows to Alaska—When blizzard-locked military airports sent out an SOS for snowplows, the equipment was loaded aboard a Liberator Express and arrived in time to clear the runways.

Gasoline Trucks to Labrador—The tank trucks were cut in half for shipment by Liberator Express and welded together again at their destination.

Wounded Men to Base Hospitals—It is estimated that more than 30,000 wounded men have been flown from field to base hospitals by Liberator Express transport planes, some of which have flown as much as 10,000 miles in 5 days.

Liberator Bombers to War Fronts!—Not assembled, of course! But the spare and replacement parts which have been delivered by Liberator Express are probably the equivalent of ten squadrons of ready-to-fly bombers.

Other cargoes flown, with destinations and flying time, have included medical supplies to North Africa, 27 hours—bomb fuses to Britain, 17 hours—aircraft engines to China, 37 hours—blood plasma to Australia, 35 hours—ammunition to India, 43 hours—mail to Iceland, 13 hours—precision tools to Russia, 24 hours.

True, the Liberator Express seldom makes the headlines. It's too busy making schedules . . . too busy making the right headlines possible. The headlines go to its famous twin—the Liberator bomber.

But when the whole story of the Liberator Express and the men who fly it can be told, it will be a heroic chapter in the history of American air power and its part in winning a global war.

Store Chain Leads With $10,000 Gift to Fund

The 1944 Community War Fund, which will be officially launched in Washington on October 1, with a $4,800,000 goal, yesterday laid preliminary campaign plans at luncheon meetings of two of its committees:

The Business and Finance Committee, with 145 business executives representing Washington's leading utilities, service and financial firms attending, met in the Willard Hotel to map "strategy" for soliciting some 2400 local business establishments for its $1,450,000 quota.

Pledge of Service Clubs

The Service Clubs Committee, made up of presidents of local civic men's clubs, met at the Mayflower Hotel to plan dedication of the campaign theme, "Crown Thy Good With Brotherhood," and pledge maximum effort to the drive's success.

The local goal this year exceeds by 20% that of the 1943 drive, Coleman Jennings, Business and Finance Campaign chairman, said, but the average increase in other cities is 25%, "so we are doing no more than our minimum duty" in asking for $400,000 more than was raised last year.

Replying to "certain businessmen" who have questioned the necessity for expanding the campaign this year, Y. E. Booker, investment banker of this city, told the Business and Finance meeting, "I think most businesses in Washington are making money out of this war."

John L. Vandegrift, acting chairman of the division, outlined the following increases in local relief agency work:

USO activities are "up" 74%; the scope of War Prisoners Aid and United Seamen's Service has increased by 163%; the United Nations War Relief Centers, helping Belgian, Czech, Norwegian and other refugees, are 42% more active; the local Community Chest has expanded its activities by 11%. One hundred and forty-five agencies in all will be financed by the drive.

The first announced business contribution in the campaign was made before the meeting yesterday, when Kirk Miller of Safeway Stores, Inc., pledged a $10,000 donation from his firm.

Meanwhile, it was reported that the Government division had accepted half of the Washington area quota—$2,400,000.

Raymond Clapper will address the fund dedication meeting on October 7, while Raymond Garrity, president of the Washington Kiwanis Club and chairman of the War Fund Service Clubs Committee, will preside and Coleman Jennings, campaign chairman, will also speak.

Appointment of Archibald MacLeish, Librarian of Congress, to the post of chairman of the fund's Government Legislative Section was announced yesterday.

29 Flee to Safety In G Street Fire; Loss Set at $5000

Fire, believed to have been caused by a smoldering cigarette on a studio couch, routed 29 persons from a rooming house at 2022 G st. nw, at 3 a. m. yesterday and resulted in damage at $5000.

The blaze destroyed a dining room and living room on the first floor and forced occupants on the upper three floors to flee by a rear fire escape. Firemen kept the flames from spreading beyond the first floor.

Mrs. Mary Miller, house manager, discovered the fire and turned in a house alarm. Another resident ran to the street and pulled a fire alarm box. The latter told police he saw a studio couch ablaze in the living room.

Eugene Smith, 19, a Marine, received minor burns to his hands while searching the house to be sure all occupants were out safely. Most of the rooms were occupied by servicemen and Government employes.

Man Fined, Wife's Term Suspended In Dance Raid

Mrs. Dora B. Clark, alias Miss Fay Thompson, 37, pleaded guilty in Municipal Court yesterday to running a dance hall called the Social Exchange Studio, 1310 Massachusetts ave. nw., without a license while her husband, Harry W. Clark, pleaded guilty to the illegal sale and possession of whiskey there.

Miss Thompson was given a suspended sentence and Clarke was fined $150 by Judge George D. Neilson.

They were arrested September 11 when police raided the studio during what was advertised as a "Blackout Dance," according to Edward Beard, Assistant Corporation Counsel. He said the establishment was patronized largely by Government girls.

WPB Will Allow 2-Way Stretch In 1944 Girdles

By the Associated Press

The two-way stretch is coming back about January.

War Production Board officials disclosed this last night, saying neoprene now is available to supply synthetic stretch to girdles and garters instead of natural rubber and WPB's textiles division is considering lifting the ban on manufacture and use of elastic yarn.

Once the go-ahead is given, however, several months will be required to get factories rolling again after a year and a half of idleness. It probably will be early next year before foundation garments, suspenders, garters, elastic-top socks and other items made of synthetic rubber reach retail stores.

Poll Tax Bill Revived; New Senate Battle Seen

The House-approved anti-polltax bill, killed by a party-splitting Senate filibuster at the last session of Congress, yesterday was revived by a favorable 3-to-2 vote of a Senate Judiciary subcommittee.

For the second time within a year the hot sectional issue appeared headed for a pitched Senate battle late this fall or early next year.

The full Senate Judiciary Committee meanwhile scheduled a unique public hearing on the measure October 25. Three to a side, proponents and opponents of the bill will debate the constitutionality of the move. Following the hearing, confined to the question of legality, and designed to resolve doubts of some committeemen, the full committee will vote on the bill.

Sees Favorable Report

Senator Frederick Van Nuys, (Democrat), of Indiana, chairman of the committee, predicted last night that the bill will be favorably reported to the Senate on the Monday following the public hearing.

A majority of the committee always has favored the measure, and a probable large majority of the Senate, but the bill never has been permitted to go to a floor vote.

Van Nuys said proponents of the bill, outlawing poll taxes as a prerequisite to voting in elections for Federal offices, can pick any three spokesmen to represent their side in the October 25 hearings, whether they are members of the Senate or not. Similarly, opponents of the bill can name any three individuals to contest the contitutionality of the measure.

Van Nuys was instructed by the subcommittee to invite Attorney General Biddle either to appear at the hearings or send an opinion on the constitutionality of the bill.

Hatch Moved for Hearing

Senator Hatch (Democrat) of New Mexico, who opposes poll taxes as a requirement for voting but doubts the constitutionality of the House-passed measure, made the motion for the committee's unusual constitutional debate. Who would represent the two sides was undetermined last night, but arrangements were made to hold the hearing in the big Senate Office building caucus room.

Hatch pointed out last night that a subcommittee headed by Senator O'Mahoney, (Democrat) of Wyoming last session voiced doubts of the legality of a similar bill, and suggested poll taxes be abolished by constitutional amendment.

McFarland Heads Group

The new subcommittee voting 3 to 2 to report the bill which passed the House last May is headed by Senator McFarland (Democrat) of Arizona, who voted with Senator Murdock (Democrat) of Utah and Senator Danaher (Republican) of Connecticut for the bill.

Opposing a favorable report by the subcommittee were Senator Connally (Democrat) of Texas, who led Southern opposition to the bill in the last Senate fight, and Senator Austin (Republican) of Vermont.

Senator Austin told the committee he was opposed to the bill on constitutional grounds and joined Hatch in his plea for an open hearing on legality.

D. C. Marine Flier Killed in Crash

Marine Second Lieut. Marvin G. Foust, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Foust of 4003 Garrison st. nw., was killed a week ago yesterday when his bomber crashed 15 miles from Daytona Beach, Fla., Associated Press dispatches reported.

He was graduated from the Naval Air Training Center, Corpus Christi, Tex., in August.

Ensign Emmett E. Lawrence of McComb, Miss., a passenger in the plane, survived the crash and made his way through a dense swamp to a highway where he was picked up by a passing motorist.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Drew Pearson

(The brass ring and a free ride on the Washington Merry-Go-Round this week goes to Gen. George C. Marshall, who in the opinion of critical Drew Pearson has been the best chief of staff commanding the United States Army during all the days that veteran reporter has been covering Washington.—Editor's Note.)

Washington—In the Nation's Capital folks think they know General Marshall. Congress, which has gone to bat unanimously for him, knows him for his patience with congressional probes and his ability at prying money out of Congress even in the peacetime days when prying was not easy.

Army strategists know him as the young officer who executed the most brilliant maneuver of the last war, the transfer of one million men from St. Mihiel to the Meuse-Argonne front, plus 40,000 tons of ammunition, 34 hospitals, 93,000 horses, 164 miles of railway and 87 depots—all with no enemy aviator discovering it.

Gen. Johnson Hagood knows him as the "most outstanding military genius of America since Stonewall Jackson;" Pershing knows him as a gangling, sandy-haired youngster who was his aide for five years; while real old-timers know him for the maps of the Texas Big Bend country which he made while a lieutenant and which are still standard for the War Department.

Others know him as one of the few Democrats who have been chief of staff; as one of only two chiefs of staff who have not been West Pointers (the other was Leonard Wood), because his father, a Democrat, couldn't get him into West Point during the McKinley Administration.

But few people in Washington know the great secret of General Marshall's ability to keep calm, keep unworried, yet get things done. Even Mrs. Marshall says she doesn't know the secret—though actually she does.

Moving about the bedroom of her home at Fort Myer last week, packing her bags for a trip to Leesburg, Va., she shook her head and said, "I don't see how he does it, really I don't."

She and her husband were just back from a trip by air to Mexico City, and she was running off to Leesburg for a rest.

On the Move

"It's all very well for me," she said, "but does the general get a rest? Not a bit of it! He no sooner gets back than he has to run up on the Hill to testify before that committee (Joint Senate and House Military Affairs on drafting fathers), and he no sooner gets through with that than he gets into another plane and flies away to Omaha to speak at the Legion convention."

One answer to Mrs. Marshall's bewilderment is to be found in herself. When General Marshall gets home at night, she protects him from interruption so he can relax and get a good night's rest.

One night, some time ago, a call came from the War Department after General Marshall had gone to sleep. Mrs. Marshall answered the phone and tried to take the message. But the voice at the other end was insistent.

Mrs. Marshall tried again. "The general is asleep, and I'd rather not disturb him. Is it anything important?"

"Oh," said the voice, with a touch of sarcasm, "it's just that the War Department is on fire!"

Marshall's job as the Army's No. 1 soldier begins at 6:30 a. m. Often, he and Mrs. Marshall take breakfast on the sunporch (meals in this house are served anywhere except in the dining room). Marshall scans two newspapers with his coffee, then makes the six-minute drive down the hill to the Potomac.

It is now only 7:30, or 7:45. In his office, the first task is to study the "Log"—a loose-leaf book with the word "Secret" stamped on the cover. This gives him a brief digest of every important tactical message received by the War Department since he left his desk the night before.

He clears away other papers—his desk is always uncluttered—and goes into his first conference. Every day the first man he sees is Gen. Thomas Handy, chief of operations. If they need to talk with Admiral King in the Navy building, there is a direct telephone line, with privacy equipment, Marshall is likely to see Handy two or three times a day. The only other man he sees as frequently is Gen. H. H. (Hap) Arnold, chief of the Air Forces.

Luncheon Conference

If a conference runs into the lunch hour, he takes the conferees home with him. Mrs. Marshall gets a telephone call just as they are leaving, and knows that in six minutes, the general and guests will walk in the door, and she must be ready for them, for he wants to sit down to the meal without preliminaries.

They talk as they drive to Fort Myer, and they talk through lunch. But when lunch is over, Mrs. Marshall takes over the talking. The guests may be American, British, Chinese, or Dutch. Whatever they are, she entertains them for exactly 15 minutes, while the general steals off to the sunporch on the second floor.

Maybe the discussion has dealt with staggering news from a battle front. Maybe an error of strategy has been revealed. But when Marshall stretches out on the chaise longue in the corner of the sunporch, the heavy weight of war passes from his mind, and he sleeps. For 15 minutes he sleeps. It is his salvation.

In the afternoon there is staff conference — either the joint chiefs or the combined chiefs. "Joint chiefs" means the American chiefs of staff—General Marshall Admiral King. The combined chiefs" are the chiefs of staff of the United Nations.

But in the evening, Marshall is one of those rare executives who knows how to leave his troubles in the office. When he comes home, he gives himself completely to the business of riding horseback, going to the movies, or reading a detective story.

One evening recently, he invited Brig. Gen. Claude Adams to dinner at his home at Fort Myer. After dinner, Marshall suggested they go to the movies at the Fort Myer theater. The chief of staff was about to set out on foot when General Adams said, "I've got a car here, with a WAC driver, and we might as well use it."

When they reached the theater, General Marshall said to the driver, Pvt. Marcella Schaetz, "After you park the car, come to the box office and there'll be a ticket for you."

WAC Marcella glowed with pleasure, and did as she was told. But when she got to the box office, an usher said, "Come this way, please," and led her to General Marshall's box. She was only a private, but she saw the show from a place of honor between two generals, one being the chief of staff. She confesses that she can't remember what the picture was about.

Armour Ideas Make the Most of Meat

Try Star Ham Shortcake—It's Delicious!

Most everyone likes good shortcake . . . and certainly everyone goes for tasty ham! So, try Ham Shortcake and give your family a double taste treat.

It's a big meal—and delicious! For the tender ham cubes, flaky shortcake and rich, tangy sauce are a flavor combination that no one can resist.

Cube 2 cups cooked Star ham . . . using leftover ham if you have it. Armour's Star Ham is your best choice because it's tender and delicious . . . has the savory goodness that's sure to please.

Add the ham to a white sauce made this way: Melt ¼ cup Cloverbloom butter or margarine, add ¼ cup flour and stir in 2 cups milk. When thick, season with ¼ tsp. salt, ⅛ tsp. pepper, 1 tsp. Worcestershire Sauce. Add ¼ cup minced green pepper and heat through.

While the ham mixture is heating, make regular biscuit dough, patting out ½ inch thick and cutting 4 circles with plain biscuit cutter. Cut 4 more with same sized doughnut cutter. Bake in 450° oven 12-15 minutes. Put together with ham mixture between. Serves 4.

READY NOW, TODAY—THE $30,000,000,000 "MIRACLE HOME" OF POSTWAR AMERICA

TO THE PUBLIC: In the August 1943 issue of our trade magazine, Practical Builder, we published certain postwar housing information of vital importance not only to the building trades but to the public at large. Since the estimated $30,000,000,000 to be spent for housing in the next ten years will come out of the pockets of America's 45 million families, we consider it our duty and our privilege to place this information before you now. We urge you to read it through.

WITH the rising crescendo of this global conflict, and the amazing miracles of war production now bringing victory within reach, the word Postwar has taken on an almost magical meaning.

The World of Tomorrow—what will it be like?

Will glass-and-plastic cars, streaking along express-highways at 100 miles per hour, make our pre-war models as extinct as model T?

Will full-color television, with 15-minute news broadcasts as standard equipment, sweep away our newspapers and our 30 million radios?

Will the electronic tube, by some dim laboratory magic, abolish lamp-cords and base-plugs, and light our homes by remote control?

And speaking of homes—what of the low-cost postwar miracle home everybody's talking about? Will it be so utterly new in design that today's homes will be as out-of-date as the bustle?

—Will it have plastic plumbing? Unbreakable windows? Glass walls? Sliding panels instead of rooms?

—Will it have self-operating electric kitchens, automatic air-conditioning, built-in furniture and refrigeration, deep-freeze lockers, electric clocks? How about one-piece bathrooms, radio-controlled heating, self-sealing closets, screenless screens, built-in aquariums, robot laundries, vitamin-ray sunlamps?

—Most important of all, how soon after the war can this miracle home be built? 2 years? 4 years? When will it be ready? Give us the facts.

We whose business it is to know the building industry, now make it our business to tell the public the truth:

You will not have to wait 2 years, or 4 years, or even 1 year, for the miracle home of tomorrow.

It is here now. Ready the minute the Armistice is signed.

And it will be built by America's practical building contractors and building-material dealers, who but for war restrictions stand ready to start building you this miracle home of tomorrow TODAY.

Who are these men—these creative building experts who have accomplished this triumph of American postwar planning?

You probably never heard of them. You do not know what they look like.

Yet these men, more than any other group, have been far ahead of the building industry in the development of low-cost housing. They have worked closely with America's building materials manufacturers to make available, at low cost, inventions and devices and installations and equipment which otherwise would be expensive luxuries for years to come.

Many people, thinking in terms of the '20s, believe the building industry has been asleep; that low-cost housing in this country has shown no revolutionary change or improvement.

We agree with them. There has been no "revolution" at all.

But since the '20s, thanks to America's practical building contractors and building-material dealers, there has been an Evolution in low-cost housing that is nothing short of astounding.

In 1920 the term "low-cost" meant as much as $10,000. Yet here is the kind of house you got for your money:

—its plumbing, windows, kitchen equipment and electric wiring were inadequate.

—it had no installed kitchen cabinets, no air-conditioning, no asbestos siding, no dry-wall construction, no fireproof shingles, no plywood.

—it had no insulation, no vapor sealing, no automatic heating, no double-glazing.

—it gave little thought to operating economy, labor-saving, interior decoration, exterior line and beauty.

—it rarely, if ever, included built-in garages, panelled playrooms, damp-proof laundries, water-tight basements. Maid's quarters in the attic, toilet in the cellar. More than one bathroom or fireplace was almost unheard of.

Yet the day the bombs dropped on Pearl Harbor, America's practical building contractors and building-material dealers, working hand-in-glove with building materials manufacturers, were building these luxuries as necessities in the low-cost home of the '40s. And your cost was not $10,000, it was nearer $6,000!

It did not happen overnight. It was twenty years in the making. But if that is not change, improvement, call it what you will, we don't know what is. And for this evolution, you can thank America's practical building contractors and building-material dealers. They are entitled to the credit.

Now these same practical building experts are "doing it again." Thanks to them, your postwar miracle home will embody three sweeping changes:

1. New or greatly improved materials in practically every step of construction. Bathrooms, kitchens, laundries and their equipment redesigned with an eye to beauty, utility and color. Heating equipment that will out-perform anything in existence before the war. Methods of construction that outstrip anything now generally known. Every invention and gadget and improvement known to American ingenuity, will go into this postwar miracle home. But mind you, practical gadgets; practical applications of such things as plastics, aluminum, magnesium, lightweight durables galore . . . to feed the needs and desires and preferences of America's postwar progress. Yet there will be . . .
2. —an even greater downward trend in proportionate cost.
3. —and as a result, an even greater upward trend in value.

And we repeat: Thanks to America's practical building contractors and building-material dealers, you won't have to wait. This miracle home is ready now—the minute the Armistice is signed.

There is, however, one looked-for change in your postwar miracle home which we tell you will not take place.

That is, Change In Appearance.

Basically, the present form of house was all right to begin with. It had to have a kitchen, bathroom, living room, bedrooms. It still has to have them today.

True, your postwar miracle home will be better designed. More compact. More carefully planned for comfort, health, safety, convenience, labor-saving, economy of operation.

But do not expect this $30,000,000,000 miracle home to resemble, even remotely, the weird freaks and futuristic monstrosities you see pictured.

Even if these monstrosities did exist—and except in the inflamed imaginations of magazine writers, they emphatically do not—your common sense would warn you away.

We suggest to the American public a simple 3-point plan for postwar home buying:

RULE 1. There are many types of so-called postwar houses in model and blueprint form. Look at all of them. See what they offer.

RULE 2. Then, see your practical building contractor. Ask him to consult with his local building-material dealer so as to get complete costs on exactly the home you want.

RULE 3. Finally, examine his costs—not in terms of dollars, but of sheer, downright value.

We know America's practical building contractors and building-material dealers. It has been our business to keep them informed for over 25 years.

And we say to the American public once and for all: Your practical building contractor and building-material dealer—no one else—will build America's $30,000,000,000 postwar miracle home.

When the last gun is fired and Peace blesses us once more, see these two experts about your postwar home.

They are part-and-parcel of your community. It's to their interest to have your interest at heart. So you are safe in entrusting to them your lifetime investment in the miracle home of tomorrow.

National Service Decision Awaited

McNutt Says President May Announce Stand on Law Replacing Work-Fight Acts

By Lin Celdon
Post Staff Writer

Whether there is to be a "Nation-wide National Service Act," to supersede several "work or fight" laws enacted by the States, may be made known by the President at his press conference today, it was said at the White House last night.

Presidential approval or rejection of such a plan was indicated last night when Paul V. McNutt, War Manpower Commissioner, said "the President and Congress are thoroughly studying the advisability of a Nation-wide National Service Act and it is up to the President to decide whether the country will have such legislation."

The legislation would constitute a labor draft.

McNutt Writes O'Conor

McNutt made his statement after he had written Gov. Herbert O'Conor of Maryland asking him not to invoke the Maryland 1917 work or fight law, which is similar to the 1943 statute, to be tested as to its constitutionality in the Baltimore City Court tomorrow.

The request by McNutt was made after Governor O'Conor had written him asking McNutt's opinion on such legislation. McNutt's answer resulted in the disclosure that three States beside Maryland have work or fight laws, and that a fourth held its law unconstitutional this month.

The law is still effective in Georgia, Alabama and North Carolina. In these three States the "law" was not passed by the Legislatures, but was ordered by the Governors, as O'Conor could have done had he wished.

In South Carolina, the fourth State, it was a legislative law and was declared unconstitutional by Judge John L. Lancaster in Spartanburg on September 9, according to records.

Judge Chides Legislators

Judge Lancaster, in voiding the law, said:

"Some of the members of the Legislature which passed this legislation would look better in the uniforms of their country than in the halls of the statehouse."

Reason for McNutt's letter to O'Conor, according to its contents made public at Annapolis, was that the 1917 work or fight law would "have a deleterious effect" upon the manpower problem. McNutt wrote that "the advisability of a Nation-wide national service act is being studied thoroughly in Washington at the present time, both by the Congress and the President."

McNutt added that it was his "sincere conviction that any law permitting the compulsory assignment of men to prviate employers under criminal penalties must provide for corresponding protection to the worker. "Although the statute," McNutt continued, "states that going wages should be paid (the Maryland 1943 work or fight law calls for prevailing wages) and the usual hours of work shall be observed, in my opinion these safeguards are not sufficient. When a worker's right to accept or refuse a job with a particular employer is withdrawn, he should be assured of satisfactory working conditions, housing, safety and many other circumstances."

Conviction of Day

In the case of Stanley Day, 19-year-old 4-F Army reject, arrested and convicted in Montgomery County and released after The Post exclusively told of his plight, which action started the fight against the Maryland law that now has received the support of the War Manpower commissioner, Day was convicted because he refused to work for $2 a day without board and lodging.

In the meantime, the criminal division of the Department of Justice yesterday continued its investigation into charges made by the Workers Defense League that certain Maryland rural magistrates had paroled men convicted under the law into the work custody of those who had them arrested. Such action is a violation of peonage and anti-involuntary servitude laws, the league claims.

Zane Meckler, associate national secretary of the league, yesterday met with officials of the civil liberties division of the Department of Justice. The civil liberties division a few days ago turned the case over to the criminal division.

Funeral Services For Lieut. Foust To Be Held Today

Funeral services for Second Lieut. Marvin Gilmore Foust, 21, USMC, who was killed September 20 when the bomber he was piloting crashed near Daytona Beach, Fla., will be held at 1 p. m. today at Fort Myer Chapel. Burial will be in Arlington Cemetery.

Lieutenant Foust, son of Mr. and Mrs. William L. Foust, Sr., 4003 Garrison st. nw., was born in Danville, Va., and reared in Washington. He was graduated from Woodrow Wilson High School and attended Maryland University before enlisting in the Marine Corps last July.

Surviving, in addition to his parents, are three sisters, Helena, Mae and Margaret Foust; three brothers, First Lieut. Perry Foust and Staff Sergt. Tracy Foust, both of the Army, and Pfc. William Foust of the Marine Corps, and his grandmother, Mrs. Mary E. Foust of Chatham, Va.

billion needed, the Treasury was expecting the 15 billion dollar issue to be oversubscribed.

Need for increased tempo in the drive was revealed by John A. Reilly, chairman of the local war finance committee, who pointed out that bond sales to individuals in Washington total $18,700,000, or only 37.4 per cent of the 50-million-dollar quota in that category. Series E bond sales total $7,600,000, or but 25.3 per cent of the 30-million-dollar E bond quota.

Other developments on the war bond front:

1. Granville Gude, head of the "Liberator Club," membership in which costs a $1000 series E bond, reported "gratifying progress." The club was formed for the purpose of raising $350,000, the cost of one of the Army's B-24 Liberator bombers.

2. Ralph Cipriano, war bond chairman of the Italian-American Victory Council, reported that a rally Sunday netted $50,000 in sales.

3. Edward C. Baltz, chairman of the business division, announced that the group had exceeded its 10-billion-dollar quota, exclusive of sales to individuals.

4. John J. Payette and Carter T. Barron, in charge of the movie division, announced that yesterday's "free-movie" day had boosted sales but that final figures were not yet available.

5. Reports from the stores included Lansburgh & Bro., $205,125 toward a $240,000 quota; Goldenberg's, $51,700 with their goal of $60,000 expected to be reached tonight. The Hecht Co. became the first department store to exceed its quota with sales now $5475 beyond the quota of $400,000.

6. A 100 per cent bond purchase banner was presented to employes of the Northwest District, mainly janitors, elevator operators and guards in Federal buildings, at ceremonies in the South Interior Building yesterday.

The 13 Hot Shoppes in Washington and nearby Maryland and Virginia reported sale yesterday of 70,000 worth of bonds. Twenty-five hundred free meals were given away to buyers. Since opening of the Third War Loan Campaign, employes of the shops have bought $177,800 worth of bonds.

Orlando Miller Rites Today

Funeral services for Orlando Miller, 24, assistant manager of Brinks, Inc., will be held today at First Wesleyan Church at 2 p. m., the Rev. Edwin L. Foot officiating. Burial will be in Cedar Hill Cemetery.

Mr. Miller, 732 Croissant pl. se., died Saturday after five weeks illness.

A native of Alexandria, Va., he moved to Washington about 35 years ago. He has been connected with Brinks, Inc., for 13 years, and before that worked for the General Outdoor Advertising Co.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Ada R. Miller; his mother, Mrs. Cora B. Miller; two daughters, Dolores M. and Doris M. Miller, all of Washington; a son, Pvt. Raymond Miller, now serving with the Army in Sicily, and a brother, Edgar Miller of Chesapeake Beach, Md.

Woman, 45, Ends Life With Gun

Lillian Ziminer, 45, of 922 Ninth st. nw. was found dead with a bullet wound in the head in the bedroom of her apartment Sunday night by her sister, Mrs. Ruth Baker of the same address, police reported.

A note, which police were unable to decipher, was found near the body. A coroner's certificate of suicide was issued.

"I quite agree it is the best ever—but you can't patent a Whiskey Sour made with Calvert Reserve"

Correct, Counselor! No one holds exclusive rights to the rich royalty of a Whiskey Sour made with Calvert Reserve. You see, everyone who makes a cocktail with this glorious whiskey discovers that Calvert Reserve's subtle "soft" flavor blends with—never overpowers—the other ingredients! And today every precious drop of Calvert Reserve comes from a limited supply* of irreplaceable reserves. Even more than ever before—it's "the choicest whiskey you can drink or serve"!

*Calvert, like every other distiller, is distilling only war alcohol.

SEPTEMBER 28, 1924... six weary U.S. Army fliers landed in Seattle... to complete the first 'round-the-world flight in history.

FROM THE TIME they landed in Boston till their arrival in Seattle, America went wild with excitement.

President Coolidge received their report at Bolling Field, Washington, after waiting three hours in the rain. Babies were soon being named for them. Congress later voted them the Distinguished Service Medal (never before awarded except for war service).

Eight men, with Major Frederick L. Martin in command, had risen from the Seattle airport 172 days before ... in four specially built Douglas planes (the Seattle, the Chicago, the Boston, and the New Orleans).

And now, what a story there was to tell! Crouched behind windshields in open cockpits, at the mercy of fog, snow, and rain, they had often groped their way on uncharted routes with little more than skill, prayer, and horse sense to guide them. For almost their only instruments were a compass, a sextant, and a Sperry-developed turn-and-bank indicator.

Early in the flight, Major Martin and Sergeant Alva Harvey, in the Seattle, crashed into a mountain in the thick Alaskan fog. The others flew the Aleutian route to the World fliers wait for good weather on the beach at Unalaska, Alaska. Waits like this were frequent, due to lack of instruments for "blind flying."

Japanese Kurile Islands, being the first to cross the Pacific by air. Then it was on to the China coast, over the steaming jungles of Burma to India, and, finally, to Europe where they were greeted by cheering throngs in Berlin, Paris, and London.

Lieut. Lowell B. Smith, in command after Major Martin's mishap, and Lieuts. Erik H. Nelson, Leslie Arnold, Jack Harding, Leigh Wade, and Staff Sergeant Henry Ogden then tried the perilous North Atlantic crossing.

The Boston, with Wade and Ogden aboard, was forced to land on the ocean, and finally sank when a crane broke while trying to lift the plane to a ship deck for repairs.

At last, with the Atlantic and the width of the American continent behind, Smith, Nelson, Arnold, and Harding in two of the original planes, and Wade and Ogden in a replacement, came down safely at Seattle. They had covered 26,345 miles in the then incredible flying time of 15 days, 3 hours, and 7 minutes—an average speed of 72½ miles an hour.

President Coolidge congratulates the fliers at Bolling Field, Washington. He and his Cabinet waited three hours in the rain to welcome them.

What their flight foreshadowed

Without the impetus which that flight gave to American aviation—to plane design, to safety and speed, to plane manufacture, to instrument development, to airport building—who can say that aviation would have grown as it has in the past 19 years?

And, without this growth of aviation, it is highly possible that President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill might never have met at Casablanca. Australia might now be a Jap colony. Montgomery might still be battling Rommel in Africa.

For both the President and the Prime Minister went to Casablanca in modern, long-range planes. The battle of the Coral Sea will go down as an historic episode in the contribution of sea and air power to the salvation of Australia.

American bombers were practically out of action at a crucial point in the African campaign. Grounded by sand trouble, they needed help. To see what could be done, an American engineer flew to Africa from Nashville, Tenn. Two weeks later, American "flying freight cars" landed in the desert with 2000 sand shields made to this engineer's specifications after he returned to Nashville. The American bombers flew again.

General H. H. Arnold, Chief of our Army Air Forces, promises bombers in the near future that will carry half a carload of bombs to Europe, and fly back again without refueling.

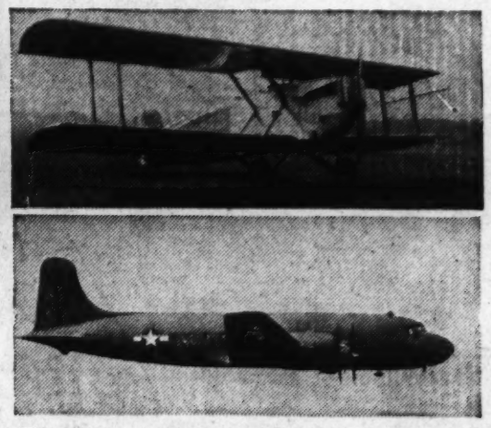
A salute to skill and courage

Without the skill, courage, and hard work of the men who made the first world flight, it is entirely possible that American aviation might not lead the world today.

Route of the epoch-making flight.

So, on this 19th anniversary of their history-making flight, let's give the first 'round-the-world fliers a tribute that means something. Let us who make America's planes and the instruments that guide and control them pledge ourselves to harder work and more production until this war is won.

We of Sperry—inventors and makers of precision flight instruments for peace and war—are proud to make that pledge as our salute to skill and courage.



These two pictures show aviation's 19 years of lusty growth.

German and Japanese Forces Bigger Now Than at War's Start, Army Warns

Lieut. Gen. Joseph T. McNarney, deputy chief of staff, made the statement that Germany's military chiefs had abandoned hope of victory, and were planning a strong defensive in hope of a stalemate. He said we are fast approaching the time when we can "come to grips with the enemy in decisive action."

General Strong told the civilian leader the Luftwaffe is now larger than in 1939, despite its losses, that the Reichswehr has replaced the army lost at Stalingrad and now has 300 well-trained divisions, and that the German food ration is higher in calory content than at the outbreak of the war.

Japan, Strong stated, is strong and growing stronger and cannot be easily beaten should Germany drop out of the war. Nippon, he revealed, has some two million men of military age who have not been called to the colors because they have not been needed, and nearly as many potential soldiers in the 17-20 age group not now subject to the draft.

Japanese air strength also is on the upgrade, the Army intelligence chief reported. Planes destroyed in combat [illegible] have been replaced, [illegible] air force is improving both in quality and numbers. Pilot training has been stepped up to keep pace with the accelerated plane production program, he stated.

"The main advantage we have is our ability to produce the weapons of war," General Strong concluded. "If through our unwillingness to face the facts we give up this advantage, we may find our opportunity for victory has escaped us permanently.

"To insure the accomplishment of our war mission—the defeat of Germany and Japan—demands the whole-hearted, single-minded effort not only of every man, woman and child in the country, but also every bit of productive power, inventive genius and executive ability we possess."

Lieut. Gen. Joseph T. McNarney, deputy chief of staff, presented a less somber picture of the war, but sounded a warning against overconfidence. The fighting ahead, he stated, "will be hard and bloody and if we sit back and coast, either in the Army or on the production front, we will be inviting disaster."

He, however, was authority for the statement that Germany military leaders have given up hope of victory. Our air offensive against Europe, said the deputy staff chief, has forced Germany to drastically cut bomber production and concentrate on building fighters.

"To every thoughtful member of the German Air Force," McNarney added, "this step could have but one meaning—that Germany had given up hope of winning the war and was turning her every effort to keep from losing the war. This step, taken months ago, was the first visible evidence that Germany had abandoned the offensive and was seeking through defensive action what at best could only be a stalemate."

Replies to Criticism

McNarney answered some of the criticism of Allied strategy voiced both here and abroad.

An invasion of Europe undertaken a year or more ago, he said, would have been "a sure failure," due to limited Anglo-American strength. Had we "jumped the gun" and tried an amphibious attack on the European citadel even later, he added, "we probably would have been thrown back with a very bloody nose."

Now, however, McNarney said, "we have set the stage and have opened up a number of practical alternative routes of invasion."

"This is forcing and will force the Germans to spread their armies thin," he stated. "With a main attack in one area and several subsidiary attacks at other points, the prospects of a successful attack on the enemy's so-called fortress of Europe are not too unfavorable."

Answers MacArthur Indirectly

To those who have charged that the Allies missed an opportunity by not moving into Italy immediately after Mussolini fell and the Germans were able to take over the country, McNarney replied:

"It is not always what we would like to do; instead, it is a question of what we can do. . . .

"The spacing of amphibious operations undertaken against Sicily, against the toe and heel of Italy and at Salerno were determined almost entirely by the time required to assemble, load, unload, reassemble and dispatch the hundreds of seaborne craft involved."

The deputy chief of staff indirectly answered General MacArthur's statement declaring he opposed an island-hopping campaign against Japan and favored "massive strokes" against the enemy.

No military man, he stated, has wanted to follow an island-by-island campaign in the Pacific, but the vast distances and supply problems involved made it necessary that we operate against the outer barriers of Jap strength, while seizing bases to protect our communication lines.

"You can be sure," McNarney told the civilian leaders, "that future operations will provide for bypassing these outer barriers to the maximum extent possible."

The deputy chief of staff, a veteran airman, discussed the aerial phases of the war at some length. The bomber offensive against Germany, he said, has had the following results:

Weakened the position of the German Air Force and compelled redistribution of strength, seriously hampering operations in Russia and the Mediterranean.

"De-housed" 1,800,000 persons, diverting substantial resources to repairs, and lowering morale and public confidence in German "political and military invincibility."

Reduced "the margin of safety" in the German rubber situation, curtailed oil production, reduced deliveries of military equipment, and cut the 1943 U-boat output and submarine base capacity.

"With the acquisition of bases in Italy," McNarney added, "every vital point in Axis Europe can now be bombed."

Trying New Tricks

The Germans, he said, are making technical improvements which they hope will stop our bombers, such as firing rockets from fighter planes.

"So far they have not succeeded," he stated, "although fighter opposition to our bombers has increased and in some attacks deep into Germany our losses have been severe."

General Strong's more somber portrayal of the situation said the Germans are making weapons "in some cases better than any which the United Nations have."

"One of their new weapons, a rocket gun, weighs less than 1800 pounds," he continued, "yet it has a firepower equal to six heavy field howitzers weighing 9 tons apiece. You have read of their 60-ton Tiger tanks in North Africa. These are now appearing in increasing numbers on the Italian mainland and on the Russian front.

New Self-Propelled Guns.

"There are also a number of heavy new self-propelled guns which have been identified both on the Russian front and on guard over the defenses of Hitler's European fortress."

General Strong said the United Nations, including Russia, have more divisions and resources in the European theater than Germany.

"However," he continued, "if it were not for the enormous sacrifices of our Russian ally the odds would be roughly four to five against us. In addition, these odds are made more unfavorable by the vast network of fortifications which the Germans have prepared against Allied attacks."

Strong warned that long casualty lists are certain once we start attacking the main German defenses, losses which may well be so heavy "they will be felt in every town and every village in the United States."

"Concerned, Not Alarmed"

Brig. Gen. Laurence S. Kuter, youthful assistant chief of air staff for plans, told the group that the Army Air Force was "concerned but not alarmed" about the Germans' new rocket gun and other new weapons against Allied bombing. "There are," he added, "still a few tricks up the American sleeve."

Kuter said the Army Air Forces has an economic analyst group which not only tells the bombing crews operating from England where Germany's key industrial plants are located but also "in what corner of what building the vital elements of many of these plants are established."

Our bombing attacks on Europe are effective, he stated, adding that the Nazis are diverting "all of their aircraft building energies to defensive single-engined fighters."

Way to Whip Nipponese

Lieut. Col. Frederick S. Wildman, assistant to Kuter, reported on "air strategy against Japan." He declared the way to whip the Nipponese is by bombing their vital centers, but said that the job is much tougher than realized.

He discussed the possible paths of approach to Tokyo, stressing the difficulties of each, including the bombing of Japan from bases in the Russian maritime provinces. Weather and Jap strength nearby would handicap our development and protection of the latter.

Wildman's analysis seemed to place more emphasis on a reconquest of Burma and an approach to Tokyo through China than other routes, a possible hint of Army Air Forces views.

All of the sessions were held behind closed doors, and the edited remarks of a number of the speakers were later released by the War Department. Undersecretary Patterson presided, while other speakers included Col. Emmett O'Donnell and Brig. Gen. Benjamin W. Chidlaw of the Army Air Forces and Lieut. Col. William G. Hipps of the General Staff. Today's sessions will be at the Pentagon and Fort Belvoir, Va., with Secretary Stimson and War Mobilization Director Byrnes as the principal speakers.

Peace to Blast War Housing

By the Associated Press

Temporary war housing projects in the United States will be one of the casualties of the peace, says John B. Blandford, jr., national housing administrator.

"The National Housing Administration has consistently taken the position that housing of temporary type must be demolished once the emergency wartime needs for which it was built no longer exist," Mr. Blandford declares in an interview published in the Architectural Forum magazine.

Communities in which temporary war house have been built will be asked to cooperate in removing them "on a realistic basis," he says.

WHY isn't there enough BUTTER?

Despite a rise from 10 to 12 points in ration point value, there is still not enough butter in many localities for you to purchase it with your stamps. WHY isn't there enough of this important food to supply our civilians? Is it the farmer's fault? Is it the distributor's fault? Is it the government's fault? NO! More than anything else, of course, you can blame the war. But, there are also five fundamental reasons for the butter shortage. If they are clearly understood by public and government, much can be done to correct them. They are:

1. PRODUCTION DECREASE. Butter production is always off in late summer and fall months because there is less pasture, but this year's decrease is greater than usual. Due to an inequitable relationship between dairy prices and other farm prices, dairying is less profitable to farmers than other farm effort. That fact, plus inability to get adequate manpower and equipment, has discouraged butter production.
2. GOVERNMENT STORAGE HOLDINGS are at an all-time high, estimated at 235,000,000 pounds. This butter would normally have been yours, but now it is set aside for our fighting men and allies. Remember, "Butter is as important as bullets."
3. INCREASED BUYING POWER has brought about an unprecedented demand for butter. Many people who had never eaten butter regularly are demanding it now.
4. UNEQUAL DISTRIBUTION. Butter is rationed on Red stamps with meats, cheese, cooking fats, lard and substitutes and the lowering of point values of other foods in this group—or the shortage of some of these foods, makes more points for the purchase of butter. This also means that areas nearest the production points buy up the supply before it can be distributed equitably to all parts of the nation.
5. LACK OF PRICE OR RATIONING CONTROL OF CREAM for purposes other than making butter. Cream brings a higher price as cream than it does as butter! There is the equivalent of many millions of pounds of butter now being "hoarded" as cream. This is not available as butter to our armed forces, Lend-Lease, or YOU!

These five reasons for the butter shortage are current. Behind and contributing to them, are a deep-rooted lack of understanding of the farmers' problems. A price order won't produce a dairy cow—it takes three years to do that! Approximately 15% of our national income goes to farmers who make up 25% of our population and their labor far exceeds 25% of the nation's productive war effort. A farmer cannot arbitrate with his cows because they must be milked twice a day, seven days a week! Nature won't wait for a debate, but YOU are going to wait a long time for more butter unless understanding and action on America's food problem is prompt!

HERE'S WHAT SHOULD BE DONE TO IMPROVE THE BUTTER SITUATION

1. Correct the farm manpower situation.
2. Make farm machinery and equipment available—quickly.
3. Adjust dairying prices—dairying is at the bottom of a list of ten basic farm products for income per hour expended.
4. Ration butter separately.
5. Take off the butter subsidy. Farmers don't want it, and it saves the average American only 60c per year . . . IF he can buy his ration allotment of 12 pounds of butter. Why put off paying our national grocery bill? Each of us will pay much more than the cost of the subsidy in years to come—in taxes, interest, and handling charges.
6. Recognize, in action instead of words, the fact that food is America's No. 1 weapon and encourage rather than discourage its production!

Land O'Lakes produces Land O'Lakes sweet cream butter—largest selling butter of its kind in America. It is always top-quality, fresh, sweet and delicious. Naturally, because of the reasons explained in this ad, there is less of this fine butter available, but remember, all Land O' Lakes dealers receive a regular—though limited—supply. So, 'ways ask for LAND O' LAKES—FIRST.

LAND O'LAKES CREAMERIES, INC.

A cooperative organization of approximately 100,000 dairy farmers whose day and night efforts are now geared to the war effort—producing millions of pounds of butter, cheese, dried eggs, dried milk, poultry and evaporsted milk, for military and civilian use.

Too Valuable To Lose

It is a tribute to Sumner Welles that it took the President no less than six weeks to choose his successor as Undersecretary of State, and it is no derogation of Edward R. Stettinius, an able and intelligent man and a first-rate administrator, to say that he will have difficulty in filling his predecessor's shoes. The fact is that the Department of State has, in its long history, had very few officials of the outstanding ability and special competence of Sumner Welles. All the more reason, therefore, why his talents should not be allowed to go unused. As we get nearer to victory and peace, the international political and economic problems facing the Nation grow in complexity and urgency. It happens that there is no man in American public life with a better grasp of these problems than Sumner Welles. He should not be allowed to retire into inactivity. A place, and an important place, should be found for him by the President.

War Bond Goal

As the Third War Loan Drive approaches its end there is every reason to believe that its stated goal of 15 billion dollars will be met. Locally and nationally, the American public has responded to the urgent and tremendous need. The staggering total has now very nearly been achieved. But the real success of this drive depends on something more than the achievement of a monetary figure. It depends, basically and essentially, on the full participation of every individual American citizen.

When a democratic government undertakes a voluntary program of this sort it relies upon an unwritten, implicit compact among its people—the compact that each of them will do his share. What that share is must be determined by the individual himself. It can be measured only in terms of his own particular means and responsibilities. The test must be the relinquishment of some of his satisfactions in the present. Nobody can meet the test comfortably. Nobody can meet it without some degree of self-denial.

In these closing days of the campaign, each of us needs to ask himself if he has done his part fully, if he has kept his compact with fellow Americans. We can congratulate ourselves as a people on the full success of this community enterprise only if all of us can answer that question affirmatively. There is still time to fulfill our personal quotas. Let's make this drive a 100-per-cent victory for ourselves in terms of conscience as well as in terms of money.

Total War

Japan's Premier, Gen. Hideki Tojo, has given Americans something to think about. In a speech broadcast to his people last week and overheard by United States listening posts, he announced new measures for the full mobilization of Japanese human and material resources. To American ears these measures sounded shockingly stringent. They entailed such steps as the evacuation of major cities, abolition of the system of retirement, compulsory employment of women and the aged. If we interpret them merely as indications of deteriorating Japanese strength, we shall sadly miss their point. They indicate, rather, enemy determination to wage all-out war involving sacrifices which we have never even approached.

Unquestionably, Japan can no longer afford the luxury of a half-hearted war effort. Six years of uninterrupted conflict have placed a heavy drain on her manpower and raw materials, have brought serious deprivations to her civilian population. This latest tightening of the Japanese belt is testimony to the effectiveness of the pressure which China, and more recently Australia and the United States, have steadily brought to bear on the island empire. But it is also testimony to the stubbornness of the Japanese will, to the toughness and resiliency which characterizes her home front as well as her soldiers in the field.

Last Sunday's issue of The Washington Post's Parade contains an article by Maj. Malcolm Wheeler-Nicholson which tells some hard facts about Japanese morale. The major's conclusion is that Japan's people, long accustomed to a living standard barely above subsistence, present no morale problem whatever. Hardship is their normal lot. There is no furor in Japan over a scarcity of butter or canned goods or meat. If the portions of rice become smaller than they were because of the exigencies of war, the Japanese eat seaweed. There is a limit, of course, to what any people can endure. But the point about the Japanese is that they seem willing to endure a great deal for the sake of imposing their imperialistic policy upon other Asiatic peoples. It is doubtful whether we can defeat such a people without relinquishing some of our own home comforts, without taking in our own belts by a couple of notches.

Freedom And Security

There is a note of profound irony in Senator Tydings' resolution to give the Philippine Islands their independence now. The islands are occupied by the Japanese army and the government at Manila is being run by a handful of Filipino Quislings. An offer of immediate independence in these circumstances might easily be misinterpreted as a desire on the part of Congress to wash its hands of the Philippine problem and leave the oppressed people of the islands to their fate. Certainly, the Japanese propagandists who are making every effort to turn the Filipinos against the United States would so interpret it.

We cannot believe, therefore, that the Tydings resolution has the support of the Administration as the Senator implied in presenting it to the Senate. In fact, some officials immediately concerned with the Philippine problem are known to oppose the resolution. We believe that opposition is sound. It is true that President Roosevelt has gone as far as he could in promising independence to the Philippines when the invaders have been driven out. But there is a vast difference between granting independence when the war is over and making at this time a gesture that could have no real significance and might work a good deal of mischief.

In any event, the islands will achieve their independence in 1946 under the Tydings-McDuffie Act. If it now seems desirable to renew our pledge and to change the date when independence can become effective, a resolution asserting the intention of Congress to grant the islands complete freedom after the Japs have been driven out would be in order. Such a resolution would not only make it clear that we intend to keep our word but would also back up General MacArthur's pledge to avenge Bataan, and drive the Japs into the sea. It would also permit free negotiations between Washington and Manila on the future relationship between the two countries.

A sudden declaration of independence for the islands when they are under the heel of an invader would produce all sorts of complications in our future relations with them. There is, for example, the question of a long-term trade agreement. Such a pact could be negotiated with comparative ease while the islands are still under the American Flag. After independence the negotiators would run head-on into the complications of making a special agreement with another nation in conflict with our most-favored-nation treaties.

More important still is the question of future defense of the islands which Walter Lippmann raises in his column on the page opposite. What earthly good would independence be to the Philippines, he asks, if the United States were to be left incapable of defending them? The problem of American air bases in the islands certainly must be worked out before the tie is cut. And this obviously involves our whole policy in the Far East. For without air and naval strength based on the Philippines, we would be unable to carry out any policy in the Far East except withdrawal. And, if we had intended to abandon the Far East to Japan's domination, as Mr. Lippmann points out, we could have done that in 1941 without going to war with her.

It is crystal clear that this immense problem cannot be disposed of by a resolution that pretends to do the impossible. Reports from the islands indicate that the gallant Filipino people are still resisting the Japanese and, with few exceptions, are remaining loyal to the United States and the Philippine Commonwealth. They have earned independence and should be granted it under terms that will guarantee its preservation. But we must not slam the door against arrangements that will make independence feasible in an effort to hasten its approach.

Postwar Cooperation

One of the factors which has contributed to the American production miracle has been intelligent cooperation between the leaders of management and labor. All the way down the line, from the top men of national organizations to local plant and union officials, there has developed a conference-table technique for sitting down together and ironing out their differences. It has resulted also in the adoption of positive measures for improved methods of production. Commenting on it in a speech the other day, Assistant Secretary of the Navy Ralph E. Bard said that "it will be a national tragedy if, with the coming of peace, management and labor elect to end their present enforced armistice and return to the old days of 'labor-management war as usual.'"

Mr. Bard urged the establishment of a joint agency of industry and labor to plan national postwar reconstruction. In his view it is by no means too early to begin this sort of planning now. Obviously employers and employes will have common interests involved in the process of conversion back to peacetime production. That conversion can be accomplished most smoothly and with minimum interruption to employment if the men who pay wages and the men who work for them look at the problems together and devise solutions with mutual regard for one another's needs and interests.

Perhaps this can most effectively be done, at least in the beginning, not by the establishment of another national agency but directly at the plant level through existing labor-management committees. The men who sit on these local bodies know one another well, have learned the habit of facing common problems cooperatively. More important still, they know intimately the problems that their own industry must overcome. They can talk with one another not in vague, general terms but concretely about the particular conversion program of their particular factory. The great need in our postwar planning today—especially in the field of domestic economics—is to get down to the grass roots.

Puerto Rico

Gov. Rexford G. Tugwell has called attention to a rather sizable mote in the American eye. The failure of Congress to adopt any constructive policy toward Puerto Rico has resulted, he says, in a progressive impoverishment and oppression of the people of that island territory. We have, on occasion, been rather lavish in our criticism of the colonial policies of other nations. Perhaps it is time for us to examine our own course of conduct and gauge how well our practices square with our pretensions.

The best that can be said for us is that we have ignored or neglected Puerto Rico. We have not sought consciously to exploit this Caribbean possession. But the truth is that in the turbulence of war we have forgotten about its needs, forgotten too about our responsibilities to it as one of our dependencies. This disregard is the more deplorable since it has kept us from any full utilization of Puerto Rico's potential contribution to our war effort. We have not even enabled the Puerto Ricans, according to Dr. Tugwell, to switch from the growing of sugar cane to the production of foods needed for the winning of the war. Our conduct appears to have been shortsighted, to put the best possible construction upon it, from the point of view of our own interests as well as Puerto Rico's.

"Two million people," declared Dr. Tugwell, "cannot permanently be kept in the twilight zone of colonialism." Any attempt to keep them in such a condition is, of course, wholly incompatible with democratic principles. We want no subjects or second-class citizens. Above all, we do not want to be in the position of suppressing the reasonable aspirations of any people. Yet the Puerto Ricans, if Dr. Tugwell's charges are to be believed, have come to entertain an angry feeling that we are subjecting them to arbitrary rule. Better than any others, Americans should understand that no people who prize individual liberty will long tolerate such a situation.

What we have been doing, according to Dr. Tugwell, is to keep the people of Puerto Rico in "humiliating suspense, by implication neither fit to govern themselves nor to become part of the United States." In point of fact, they are not now prepared for either position—a state of affairs for which our neglect has been at least partially responsible. We can best make amends by giving the Puerto Ricans economic assistance and a steadily increasing measure of autonomy. Our role is that of a responsible guardian. As in any guardianship, the purpose must be to promote growth and maturity that will enable a people to shape their own destiny.

END OF DROUGHT

Rain came in the night,
Bright and unexpected.
A flash, a thundering voice,
And then the rain.

When hearts were nearly drained of faith,
And dried of hope;
Like blades of grass, laid over.
Brown and waiting,

Then came the rain!
Fresh, clean and strong,
And who could stop it?
No hand on earth, we lay
Still in the comfort of it.
We sensed each stiffening, greening blade,
And knew the apple trees were singing,
And corn waking in the glade.
We slept the soft, black hours
To falling music the rain made.

Holland's Finances

Johannes Van Den Brock

Pays Her Way

TO FINANCE a war is a tough job for any nation. But to finance the war effort of a nation most of whose territory is occupied by the enemy demands all the resourcefulness of its government.

The funds which the Netherlands government had at its disposal when it arrived in England on that fateful day of May 14, 1940, consisted in the first place of a certain amount of gold. It was only a small part of the gold which the Netherlands Bank had shipped from Holland in time to prevent it falling into enemy hands. The greater part of that gold became "frozen" and was, therefore, not at the government's free disposal. Furthermore, the state possessed certain balances, and claims abroad, and with these assets the machinery had to be created to continue the war from London.

In the beginning it was still fairly easy for the Dutch to fill their dollar and sterling needs. Holland had important financial claims on the Netherlands East Indies, and the considerable volume of exports which these territories maintained made it possible for them to pay these claims in foreign currency which the motherland needed so badly. After the fall of Java this source dried up completely. Furthermore, when war broke out, there were goods on their way to Holland which could no longer reach their destination and which the government was able to dispose of.

In maintaining our war effort we are in a less favorable position than other of our Allies, mainly because the upkeep of the Netherlands navy claims such a large share of our budget. Our navy was considerbly larger than that of other of the smaller United Nations such as Belgium, Norway and Poland. Even now, despite the considerable losses which the Navy suffered during the Java Sea battles, over 70 per cent of our budget is spent for the Netherlands navy and its air service. Over 10 per cent is spent for the Netherlands army legion which has been formed in England. Thus nearly 90 per cent of all state expenditure is devoted to Holland's direct war effort.

Return to Mother Country

In comparison a modest amount is spent for administrative purposes. Ten government departments, which administer affairs and prepare plans for the return to the mother country and its reconstruction after liberation, need only a small percentage of our total expenditure.

Meanwhile each dollar and each pound which we spend diminishes the limited means which were at our disposal abroad at the outbreak of war or which have since accrued. We have no means to create new incomes. We continue to buy our part in the war effort in hard cash and pay our way with the little money we have left. But the end of this small reserve is already in sight. The government shall, therefore, be obliged to take steps for further financing our war effort by entering into arrangements with our Allies enabling us to cover our financial needs.

What in the maentime, is happening to the mother country?

Not only have we accumulated this immense national debt, but the Germans have, moreover, committed large-scale plunder and bled the country white. Add to this the debt which the upkeep of our war effort obliges us to contract abroad and the further obligations which we shall have to meet in connection with the reconstruction and the payment of indemnities for war losses suffered by Dutch citizens, and a rather gloomy picture presents itself of the impovishment which postwar Holland shall have to face.

Will the Dutch taxpayer be able to shoulder this heavy burden? To my mind only the revival and reconstruction of our economic life can pull us through. We certainly should not count too much on reparation payments by Germany. There will be many claimants among the countries which the Germans have devastated and, as Germany will not be able to pay in gold nor in goods—of which it will have little left—it could only be made to pay in labor. This would mean diverting to Germany orders which could be filled by other countries in order to help her reestablish her productive machinery. This mistake made after the last war when German prosperity was largely restored at the expense of the nations which supplied credits to Germany, should, I think, not be repeated.

Future Far From Bright

Although the future is far from bright, it would be wrong to conclude that after the war Holland will be one of the poorest nations on earth for a long time to come. For ours is not the only national debt which has increased. The same happened in countries like the United States and Britain, which also have an immense war bill to pay.

The plans which the Netherlands government is now preparing, details of which cannot be divulged, are being drawn up in the most concrete form. It is, however, realized, that they may have to be modified as the situation changes.

The national currency will have to be reestablished in such a was as to create confidence abroad. In this connection, the plans of our allies, such as those dealing with the creation of an international stabilization fund, will have to be taken into account.

Finally we will have to take account of the fact that definite opinions may have taken shape in Holland itself. The government which will be at the helm in Holland after the war will have to ascertain, in the first place, on what lines the people as a whole are thinking.

Russia-Britain-U. S.

By Barnet Nover

Importance Of The Moscow Meeting

THE DISTANCE, as the crow flies, between Stalingrad and Kiev is roughly 650 miles. That distance the Red Army has advanced in less than a year. At the same rate of progress the Russians should be in Berlin well before the end of 1944.

Such rule of thumb calculations are, of course, deceptive. They necessarily leave out of account all manner of complicating factors.

They leave out, for instance, the problem of supply which will become more and more difficult for the Russians as they advance west and simpler for the Germans the nearer they get to their home base.

On the other hand, such calculations do not take into account the potentially disastrous effect on the German army's morale and the morale of the satellite troops on the Eastern Front of a continuous retreat.

THE POINT is, however, that we have now reached the stage in the war where though the fighting is likely to be fiercer and bloodier than ever, a sudden German military collapse has become a definite and ever-present possibility.

That is why the forthcoming meeting of British, American and Russian foreign ministers may prove of such far-reaching importance. Indeed, it is not too much to say that this meeting may have a decisive bearing on the question whether we are to win or lose the peace.

Certainly it would be foolish to assume that the fact that the meeting is to be held insures its success.

All we can assume at this time is that the Kremlin is now willing, as the British and American Governments have been willing for many months, to participate in three-way discussions of political problems, at least on a level below that of heads of governments.

FROM THE RUSSIAN point of view the timing of this conference of foreign ministers could hardly be improved upon.

The direct and indirect contributions of the United States and Great Britain to the Russian advance have been considerable. But the major credit for the tremendous victories won by the Red Army all the way from the Volga to the Dnieper belongs, of course, to the Russians. As a result Russia's prestige throughout the world has risen to tremendous heights.

Furthermore it may not be very long before the Germans have been driven out of the Baltic States and out of that part of Poland which the Russians had occupied in September, 1939, at the time of the Fourth Partition. Once in possession and determined to incorporate those areas and perhaps others, in the Soviet Union, there is very little that we or the British would be able to do about it.

THE QUESTION is whether our good will, and the hope of our cooperation and collaboration in the postwar era will be deemed by the Russians sufficiently important and desirable to be worth important concessions on their part.

Certainly it is not additional territory that Russia needs or buffer states, however numerous and however subject to Russian pressure, but peace and recuperation and rehabilitation.

What Russia will need most after the war will be a long period of peace that will give her time to recuperate, to rebuild her devastated areas, to expand her production, to give her heroic people who have suffered so terribly during this war at least some of the things that were withheld from them during the 20 years of defense preparations and the bitter years of war.

CAN WE HELP Russia in this regard?

The answer is that we can. Certainly there is a great deal we can do to help in the rehabilitation of Russia, in the speeding up of Russian recovery. And such a program of aid would be to our and the world's advantage as well as to Russia's.

But can we exorcise from Russian minds that fear of war and invasion which they have lived with so long and which became a grim reality on June 22, 1941?

We cannot do so, of course, merely by making vague promises of cooperation in the peace to come. The Russians are hard-boiled realists. They know that the promises made by one administration can be flouted by the next, that while the President proposes the Senate disposes.

IF THE RUSSIANS assume, rightly or wrongly, that we are not prepared to abandon our former policy of isolation hook, line and sinker, we shall have great difficulty in getting them to agree with us on a joint German policy or Polish policy or Baltic or Balkan policy.

If, on the other hand, they are convinced that we are prepared and determined to play a full and active part in the organization and maintenance of peace they may be willing to move arm in arm with us and the British. But we have first to show them.

At Moscow we shall be in a position to play our economic trump. But the equally valuable American political card is still, unfortunately, still to be picked out of the deck.

Wake Up Congress

In the name of all my friends who have died in this war so far, in the name of the fellows still fighting and the fellows getting trained to fight, I implore the American people who can still exercise their freedoms to demand that our Congress wake up.

I am writing for almost a full platoon of Marines—boys who never mixed in politics, who rarely read beyond the sports pages in the newspapers, who never even knew the names of their Congressmen. I am writing for them, because we are fed up—completely sick and tired with what we've been hearing about our Congress on the radio.

Don't they know that guys are dying every day so that we can get this war over faster? How dare they be so stupid and narrow-minded and small and mean? President Roosevelt is giving us great leadership in this war. And Congress? Doing everything it can to obstruct him. Undermining and killing all Government agencies charged with fighting this war, like the OPA and the OWI. Disuniting our people in political squabbles about the "fourth term" and "Reds" and "Harry Hopkins." Getting our people full of prejudices and narrow-sighted half-truths that endanger our victory in war as well as the peace to follow.

Tonight we heard that some Republicans are squabbling in Congress over a resolution about the postwar world. What does the sovereignty of the United States mean when there are American boys dying in New Guinea, Burma, Italy, Persia and God knows where else? Can't they see, our freedom of action has long since vanished? Either we join hands with the rest of the democracies and fight all over the world, or we sit by ourselves and get out of the rest of the world. And we can't do the latter. We welcome the fullest alliances with Britain, China and the Reds. We're not afraid of any of them. We like them, and our Congressmen better learn soon that we like them and need them.

Government Funds?

In a letter to the editor, "Subsidize Dairymen," in The Post as of September 23, the writer discusses the pros and cons of helping the milk farmer by raising milk prices 1.6 cents per quart. She concludes that if a raise in price is necessary it should be "through the use of Government subsidies and not passed on to the already overburdened consumer."

Government subsidies are from Government funds. Government funds are the people's money. There is no Government money per se. There is only money placed in the hands of a central authority for administration. Any financing done by so-called Government funds is already passed on to the already overburdened consumer. Many couples with children are able to claim enough exemptions to relieve them from paying any income taxes. Other persons without exemptions are keeping these Government funds supplied. Therefore, when any business is financed by Government funds it is these people who are paying for the advance in prices and not some mythical fund. You and I brother!

Public Scandals

You write "Gallinger Mess." We have a public scandal in some of the District institutions every year and have had as far back as I can remember. Most of the tales are true.

I would suggest a remedy: The District should have a board of control who would have full charge of the management of all the District institutions and be responsible for the proper conduct of them.

It should consist of three men: a lawyer, to be selected by the vote of the Bar Association; a medical doctor, selected by the Medical Society, and a well-trained businessman, nominated by the Board of Trade.

This board of control to have full charge of every District institution and handle the funds allotted to each.

Such a system is needed and will stop all the scandals and clean up the management and stop the waste and overhead.

Crush Tyrants

A citizen is not worthy to be called "countryman" if, in the trying days of war, he fails to invest as much money as possible in bonds and stamps to aid his country to buy the necessary war equipment to crush the tyrants and save human dignity.

Study Of A Horse Follower

I'm Pembroke the Plunger from
Rahway, N. J.—
I follow the ponies whenever I may;
Hot tips on a good thing are given to me—
On which I bet two bucks, and sometimes bet three.
A lover of horses, by them I am spurned;
Alas, my affections are seldom returned!
I know every gee-gee and what it can do—
It's what each one does that keeps
Pembroke so blue!

II.

I read a best seller (it's stable de hote)—
And better than anything Shaw ever wrote;
Fine writing's my passion; I love
a deep plot
Involving cold figures and beetles quite hot.
My object in life is improving the breed,
And how it's improved by the stuff that I read!
I play 'em at home and I play 'em away—
I'm Pembroke the Plunger of Rahway, N. J.

III.

I study the jockeys, I study the mounts,
I study the grooms, for it's breeding that counts;
I study the charts and I wade through the text
To find for a fact what a horse will do next;
I search through the date with diligence deep,
And then play a hunch that I got in my sleep!
The ones I select ain't the ones that I play—
I'm Pembroke the Plunger of Rahway, N. J.

IV.

I know all the trainers most intimately—
I call 'em all "Jack" (and, boy, what they call me!!)—
I point out the owners with feelings of pride
(And they point to me with a stern
"Hey, outside"!) . . .
I handicap horses well into each night—
And once every season my figures are right;
I get tips in whispers and answer
"Okay"—
I'm Pembroke the Plunger of Rahway, N. J.

V.

I hate all discomforts wherever they are (Except in a hot, crowded bus, train or car);
No hard work I'll do 'round my home or the shop,
But, once at the track, my objections all drop;
I'll struggle, I'll battle, I'll sweat like a bull—
And then find my best bet was under a pull!
No effort's too great when the gee-gees I play—
I'm Pembroke the Plunger of Rahway, N. J.

VI.

The charts are my Bible: my faith in 'em's high;
How wrong was that man who said "Figures don't lie!"
I make my selections with diligence tall—
And then at the track never play
'em at all;
A tip from some fellow I don't even know
Is all that I need to bet straight, place or show;
I talk to myself after each race,
they say—
I'm Pembroke the Plunger of Rahway, N. J.

VII.

I study the shoes that each race horse will wear,
No matter, of course, if my own feet are bare;
I know what's good breeding, I know what is bad—
Just mention a horse and I'll tell you its dad;
The weights are important, as daily
it's shown (The doctor says I should keep track of my own!)—
A turfman am I, ah, that sweet smell of hay!
I'm Pembroke the Plunger of Rahway, N. J.

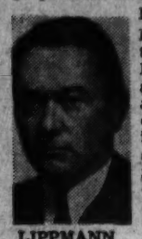
Already overburdened, few of them did much and one big area was completely neglected because the head warden refused to assign his men to the job.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

Generalities Are Not A Policy

THE SENATORS may well be right in not wishing to debate now the abstract and general proposition laid down in the Fulbright resolution. The action of the House is a clear and unimpeachable expression of public opinion, and the next step is to move from the general principle to the particular and practical application of it.



LIPPMANN

Though little attention has been paid to it as yet, something happened last week which will compel Congress to face the real issues of our foreign policy, or admit that it is not interested in them. By an agreement reached by President Roosevelt, Secretary Hull and President Quezon, a resolution has been introduced in the Senate by Mr. Tydings and in the House by Mr. Bell of Missouri to give the Philippine Islands their complete independence at any time within 30 days of the passage of the resolution. Under existing law, known as the Tydings-McDuffie Act, the Philippines become an independent sovereign state on July 4, 1946.

This action is being taken to counteract the Japanese move to set up a Quisling puppet government in Manila.

SINCE NO one will pretend that the Philippines alone are capable of defending themselves, the question must be faced as to how the Philippines are to be defended after the United Nations have recovered them from the Japanese. Under the existing act, the United States retains its "naval reservations and fueling stations" after full independence is granted and until a treaty dealing with them has been negotiated with the Philippine government. But the land and air defenses of the islands pass at once out of our hands.

It is evident that this Act, which was passed in 1934, takes no account of the fact, so amply demonstrated at Hawaii and Singapore, that a navy cannot defend a naval base. It places upon the Filipinos an implied obligation to defend, though they lack the means, our naval bases; and it places us in the position where we have a naval base at a distance of 7000 miles to which we cannot guarantee an assured defense.

REGARDLESS OF what Japanese propaganda or Filipino Quislings may make of it, this is not a statesmanlike solution of the problem. Senator Tydings says that we must take this action as a propaganda measure. It would be better propaganda, because far more convincing to the thoughtful, if we took the position that the effective independence of the islands must be accomplished by the formation of a reliable regime of security in the Pacific.

A Filipino who does not see that is not fit to govern an independent state. An American who does not see that is making the fatal error of creating a distant entanglement without providing the necessary means to carry out the commitment.

FOR WHAT earthly good is independence to the Philippines if the United States is incapable of defending them? And how can the United States afford to retain the commitment, which the naval bases as well as considerations of humanity would entail, if no agreements have been reached which make secure the whole region in which the islands lie? We cannot withdraw entirely, and wash our hands of the Philippines, without washing our hands also of China, the Netherlands Indies, Australia. The Philippines are the strategic center of that whole region. If it were our intention to leave the Far East, we need not have had a war with Japan in 1941.

On the other hand, we cannot take the tremendous risk of staying there with just enough force to get into trouble and with not enough force to be invulnerable. If Bataan and Corregidor have not burned that lesson upon our minds, we are hard to teach when it comes to foreign affairs.

THE PHILIPPINE question is, therefore, inextricably bound up with the whole settlement in the Pacific and Eastern Asia. If it is advisable to pass the Tydings bill now, let it be done. But let it not be done without our making it clear that we are aware of the problem and of its immense consequences. To act as if we thought the independence of the Philippines were something which could be enacted by a congressional vote would be reckless and imprudent to the last degree.

The independence of the Philippines, the kind of treaty which would have to be negotiated with the Filipinos on the subject of their defense, cannot be separated from the agreements we reach or fail to reach with all the other great powers of the Pacific. In the absence of adequate agreements with China and Russia on the Asiatic mainland, with the British and the Netherlands empires, the United States cannot, except at exorbitant cost and danger, project its power 7000 miles across the Pacific Ocean. To attempt to do that without even having a clear knowledge of what will be Filipino foreign policy, and Filipino military policy, would be sheer folly.

SO NOW that the President, the Secretary of State, and President Quezon, have raised the question in such a way that it must be acted upon, the era when high sounding generalities could pass as a substitute for foreign policy comes abruptly to an end. It has come to its end also in Europe, and we must move now from debating abstractions to the negotiation of agreements with the other great powers.

Tolan, Langer Asked to WHC Parley Today

Representative Tolan (Democrat) of California and Senator Langer (Republican) of North Dakota, who introduced into Congress the idea of converting the Senate garage into sleeping quarters for transient servicemen, yesterday were invited to attend the meeting of the War Hospitality Committee's lodging committee today at 2 p. m. in Servicemen's Club No. 1, 306 9th st. nw.

Senator Wiley (Republican) of Wisconsin also was invited. Earlier this week he told the Senate that the garage accommodations would present a sanitary problem and suggested "dry barracks" be erected in the Union Station plaza if facilities of the converted Capital Park Hotel do not answer needs.

Invitations were extended to the regular Tuesday meeting by Winfree Johnson, chairman of WHC's lodging committee, which has handled lodgings for service men on leave for more than a year.

Johnson said he welcomed the opportunity to bring to the attention of those members of the Senate and House, who are particularly interested, a complete picture of the lodging situation at present."

Controversy has flared since Representative Tolan reported finding 1000 men asleep on benches, floors and in phone booths at Union Station. Representative Wiley subsequently sent one of his office staff to investigate who reported finding less than 75 there. Johnson said servicemen already had ample accommodations, that 250 beds in the Memorial Bridge recreation area and 28 cots at the Christ Church Center, 3100 O st. nw., were vacant the night Representative Tolan made his investigation.

He said also that Union Station needs would be alleviated by opening in two weeks of the new United Nations Service Club in the renovated Capital Park Hotel, which is about two blocks nearer the station than the Senate garage.

Wartime Washington

By Merlo Pusey

Still Holding Home Front With Lollypops

WHILE the War Food Administration was announcing its latest subsidy a few days ago the Japanese government was putting into effect a drastic order for total mobilization of men, women and even school children. There is, of course, no direct relation between the two events. Yet one reveals that the Japs are settling down for a long, hard fight with every resource at their command, and other shows that we are still coddling our home front with lollypops.

PUSEY

It is not necessary for the United States to go totalitarian, as Japan has done, to win this war. Nor is it necessary for our home front to make the extreme sacrifices that are imposed upon the Japanese people. But in all conscience we ought to be giving more of our substance to this fight instead of receiving another helping of cream puffs from the Government.

The milk subsidy in itself is merely a convenient way of evading realities. Wartime conditions have increased the cost of producing milk and thus encouraged dairymen to go out of business. But the country is consuming more milk and it is vital to the health of the people that the supply be maintained at present levels. This clearly indicates the necessity of higher returns for dairymen in the areas where the pinch is being felt. The only question that arises is whether the Government or the consumers of milk should pay these higher costs.

WFA has decided to heap this additional burden upon the Government. Now if the Government had agreed to pay only this small portion of our food bills, it would be a matter of little consequence. But milk is only one of many foods that have been subsidized, or will be subsidized if present plans are carried through. So we are face to face with the issue of how far the Government should go in borrowing money to pad the grocery budgets of the people in wartime.

IF THERE was any necessity for Federal aid to maintain a decent standard of living, such handouts could be justified in spite of our immense outlays for war. But no such necessity exists. The bald fact is that these subsidies are being piled on top of a mountain of savings which the people cannot spend because of rationing and the now extensive shortages of some consumer goods. Some weeks ago the Department of Commerce estimated that the people of this country will have nearly 37 billion dollars of surplus income in 1943 after paying for the goods and services they use and after paying their taxes.

Nor should anyone suppose that all of these savings are concentrated in the hands of the wealthy. Studies by the OPA show substantial savings last year by families and single persons with incomes from $1500 to $3000 a year. Indeed families of low income are experiencing greater prosperity than they have ever known. And millions, compared to their previous standards of living, are getting rich out of the war.

Let us see what is happening to the so-called middle income group earning from $3000 to $5000. Last year the average family in this category (including single persons living alone) saved $943, according to OPA, or 25 per cent of its income. Average personal taxes amounted to only $57. In the next income bracket, $5000 to $10,000, the average outlay for personal taxes was $208 compared with $2366 that went into the savings.

Heavier taxes have been imposed but incomes have also greatly increased, thus piling up enormous mountains of savings. But the WFA says in effect that the people should use these savings to pay slightly higher prices for milk and various other foods. Of course, producers of some essential foods must get higher prices or they will not keep on producing. But the Government is willing to meet this expense with borrowed money so that the people will not have to use their greatly increased income for that purpose.

THIS mollycoddling is all the more absurd because the cost of living is now moving downward while earnings continue to mount. The people as a whole are better able to pay all their grocery bills than they have ever been before in the history of the United States. The colossal surplus of income which they have left over when all their living expenses have been paid makes it feasible for the Government to levy taxes that would pay a large portion of the cost of the war while it is being fought.

But the subsidy boys won't wait for their program to be financed by taxes. Instead, the WFA is saying in effect, "Go ahead and hoard your increased earnings. We will borrow more money to pay the higher cost of getting milk on your table. And when the boys who are out on the battlefield risking their lives for your safety come back, if they do come back, they can help repay the money we are borrowing to give you home-front boys an extra glass of milk."

I find it impossible to believe that the American people will stand behind a policy of this sort. We are not a nation of softies, and our sense of fairness is at least sufficiently keen to revolt at the idea of feathering our nests at home while our brothers and sons are fighting for us abroad. Nor are we a nation of nincompoops. We know that continued borrowing of billions upon billions to put more excess purchasing power into the hands of the people brings us ever closer to the brink of economic disaster. Yet we are taking a long time to wake up to the fact that we can't duck the obligation of paying for this war by distributing IOUs and granting subsidies.

Bible Society Told D. C. Need

The mounting influence of the Bible in wartime Washington was stressed at yesterday's annual luncheon of the Washington City Bible Society in the YMCA, 17th and K sts.

Speakers were Rome A. Betts and Dr. George Dilworth, secretaries of the American Bible Society; George E. Harris, executive vice president of the D. C. Organized Bible Class Association; Dr. William L. Darby, president of the Washington City Bible Society, and Robert Tate Allan, church editor, The Washington Post. Bible Society vice president George B. Fraser, moderator of the District Baptist Convention, presided.

In his annual report Dr. Darby said that $3000 had been raised in the past year to provide 20,000 Testaments for distribution to servicemen in this area. Some of that sum has been given to the American Bible Society for work outside Washington, he said.

Betts said that "nothing the Christian Church has to do today is of more importance than Bible distribution." He illustrated servicemen's demand for Testaments with several stories.

Dr. Dilworth of Philadelphia said that the war has brought a new evaluation of the Word of God in the life of men and nations.

Allan told how, through the courtesy of Dr. Darby, the religious news department of The Washington Post has provided Testaments for its employes entering the armed forces.

Dr. Darby said before the meeting that the society hoped to raise $4000 this year for 20,000 Testaments. The D. C. Organized Bible Class Association will raise $1000 of that amount through Bible classes and youth groups, he said.

Red Cross Will Ask $200,000,000 Fund In 1944 Campaign

Unprecedented expansion of Red Cross services in various battle areas of global war has made it necessary to ask the American people for an additional 200 million dollars by March of next year to carry on work with troops abroad and at home, Chairman Norman H. Davis, told the Red Cross Central Committee yesterday on his return from an inspection trip in North Africa and Sicily.

"Hardly a day passes we don't open a service club or extend facilities and personnel in hospitals and camps and naval and army air stations," Davis said.

"All this is being done at specific request of the Army and Navy. Present estimates indicate we will need at least 200 million dollars by March, he added.

Leon Fraser, president of First National Bank of New York, will head the March national fund campaign, Davis revealed.

NEW IDEA for Engine-Cooling

BURY A BIG, air-cooled radial aircraft engine in a tight armored compartment of a U. S. Army medium tank ... and you have one of the toughest blast-cooling problems imaginable. ¶ A.M.&M. engineers solved this problem by designing a new fan with a laminar flow profile. Although made of steel, die-formed and welded, it weighed no more than the cast aluminum fan wheel which it replaced. Best of all, this new fan reduced engine temperatures by many degrees, thereby eliminating the hazards of overheating and consequent stalling. ¶ It is ENGINEERING COMPETENCE like this ... plus the plant facilities and manpower for diversified, large-scale manufacturing that enables this company to develop and produce efficiently for the armed services and the essential wartime industries.

Mr. Serlin Up and Shatters Canard of Money Lust!

WILL WONDERS never cease!

Associates of Oscar Serlin let it become known over the weekend that the producer of "Life With Father" had turned down an offer of $600,000 for the screen rights to the play.

OSCAR SERLIN

The offer, described with undoubted accuracy as the largest ever made for film rights to a stage hit, was made by Producing Artists, Inc., the recently organized producing firm headed by David L. Loew and Arthur S. Lyons. The Serlin office further reveals that the offer included provisions for the production of a picture annually, "based upon further story content or sequel to 'Life With Father,'" for a number of years to be agreed upon.

In a wire thanking the company for the offer, Mr. Serlin is reported to have said, "In any deal that is eventually made, the financial terms will not be the persuading factor."

Fevven's sake, what's the theatrical world coming to—the millenium?

On second thought, Mr. Serlin's decision is not so surprising as it might seem at first blush. "Life With Father" was originally backed by stockholders—"angels" to you—almost to the number of Mr. Heinz's pickles. When $500,000 was being marveled at as a possible price for the screen rights, Howard Lindsay is said to have figured out that if it sold for that price, his "cut" as co-author, investor and star, after tax and all other deductions, would be in the neighborhood of $15,000. Others of the 21-odd part owners would get proportionately less. It may be after all, in this case, that the individual profit motif does not enter.

The American Theater Wing, Inc., Washington Stage Door Canteen is celebrating its first anniversary this week, September 27 to October 3. Like the other canteens around the country operated under the same auspices, the Capital's refectory for Allied Nations servicemen has rendered yeoman's service in entertaining and refreshing the inner man of the armed forces and has been a huge success—thanks to the indefatigable energy and devotion of its sponsors and the wholehearted cooperation of civilian Washington. A cordial wire from Armina Langner and Inez Robinson, director and codirector, respectively, states that the night of October 1 will be Newspaper Night, "when we pay tribute to the newspapers that have so generously cooperated."

Broadway's Best for Uncle Sam's Ditto

The casts of 13 Broadway hits have volunteered a series of "night-off" play dates to entertain the armed forces during the coming winter, according to last word from USO-Camp Shows. Representatives of these casts met recently with USO-Camp Shows, Actors Equity, the International Alliance of Theatrical Employes and the American Federation of Musicians officials to outline a program of entertainment which, with the consent of the necessary authorities, will be presented in the Eastern military area by performers working currently in New York productions and in posts and stations adjacent to cities where road companies are playing. The casts making this proposal are those of "Life With Father," "Something for the Boys," "Three's a Family," "Early to Bed," "Harriet," "Blithe Spirit," "Janie," "Doughgirls," "Rosalinda," "Oklahoma," "Star and Garter," "Kiss and Tell" and "My Dear Public"—than which there are no whicher.

It may be a little late to mention it, but Nancy Hill, the Conover model, who was one of the three to be draped in expensive satin velours right before your eyes by Ed Wynn in "Big Time," at the National last week, will have her attractive likeness on the front covers of five national magazines between now and the first of the year. Or so they tell me. In addition to her modeling and stage "acting," Miss Hill is a graduate dentist—of all things—and has applied for overseas duty with the Red Cross. Quite a gal, all in all—the redhead of the Wynn trio, if you remember.

An unexpected and welcome recent visitor to the tesselated elegance of the drayma department was L. Stoddard Taylor, for 30 years manager of the Belasco Theater which now houses the Washington Stage Door Canteen. As impeccably dapper as always, Mr. Taylor is on the last lap of a three-month northern visit to Canada and way stations this side of the border and, by his own confession, wouldn't mind again being major domo of something like the house over which he presided with distinction for so long. Which is totally, incomprehensible after viewing snapshots of the Spanish "castle" in which Mr. and Mrs. Taylor now make their home in Winter Park, Fla.

Last week's bond rally at Sidney Lust's Hyattsville Theater accounted for sales of $209,000 in war bonds, approximately one-third of the sum total of $600,000 registered in the entire county. An elaborate program, preliminary to the showing of "Above Suspicion," was m. c.'d by David Ginsberg, long one of the Lust wheelhorses.

Sparkplugs of New Lonsdale Comedy

ROLAND YOUNG, PHILIP OBER, MARGARET LINDSAY, three of the most important figures—Mr. Young and Miss Lindsay are costarred—in "Another Love Story," which last night was accorded its metropolitan premiere in the National Theater, preliminary to its Broadway opening. Doris Dalton and Arthur Margetson also are prominently cast

"Another Love Story," National, Is a Sprightly Parlor Piece

By Nelson B. Bell

"ANOTHER LOVE STORY." Louis Lotito presents a new comedy, in two acts and four scenes, by Frederick Lonsdale. Staged by the author; settings by Raymond Sovey. At the National Theater.

—THE CAST—

George Wayne ..... Roland Young
Mortimer ..... Henry Mowbray
Elsie Williams Browne .... Doris Dalton
Robert Crayle ..... Lyster Chambers
Reginald Williams Browne ..... Fred Irving Lewis
John Asprey .. ... Arthur Margetson
Michael Foxx ..... Philip Ober
Molly Asprey ..... Augusta Dabney

Diana Flynn ..... Margaret Lindsay
Maggie Sykes ..... Jane Cotter

With his fine flair for involving literate and agreeable people in such romantic complexities as usually are tritely referred to as "sophisticated," and his rare gift of brittle and pungent dialogue, Frederick Lonsdale has concocted a deftly diverting drawing-room comedy in "Another Love Story."

Accorded its metropolitan premiere in the National Theater last night, the play disclosed itself as an amiable charade in two acts and four scenes, deliberately paced in point of physical movement but lively, amusing and occasionally audacious in the play and counterplay of sharply turned speeches addressed to three sets of marital muddles that bob up in the home of Mrs. Williams Browne.

No principal character but finds himself, or herself, caught up in perplexing involvements with at least two members of the opposite gender. Elsie Williams Browne is posed between the pompous boredom of her present husband and the suave urbanity of John Asprey, the husband she had divorced and invited down only as a decent gesture to see his daughter married to an obscure gentleman by the name of Michael Foxx. The enigmatic Mr. Foxx finds himself confronted by an earlier love whose fascinations he still is unable to resist. John Wayne, Mrs. Williams Browne's timid and tortured brother, is torn between Celia Hale, whom he detests, and his secretary, Maggie Sykes, to both of whom he owes a debt for the impetuous indiscretions of his wooing.

Out of this tangle of high regard and violent disregard, the author has wound a smooth skein of comic vacillation, bitter vituperation and eventual harmony. He has accomplished this considerable feat by the sheer potency of keen wit and an amusing play of humorously sound psychology. The solution, perhaps, might best be described as a triumph of magnetic attraction.

The characters in his fable are sharply drawn, effectively contrasted and, for the main, excellently portrayed.

In the role of the spineless Mr. Wayne, Roland Young has a part cut nicely to the measure of his droll brand of Milquetoast comedy. It is handsomely set off by the spirit and verve with which Fay Baker and Jane Cotter endow the rival Celia and Maggie, recruited from opposite ends of the social scale in everything but their eye single to the altar.

Miss Lindsay, Margetson Score

Margaret Lindsay, his costar, presents a particularly lovely and capable figure as Diana Flynn, the old flame who could neither resist Michael Foxx nor be resisted by him, and Arthur Margetson and Fred Irving Lewis make it abundantly plain why Mrs. Williams Browne, strikingly portrayed by Doris Dalton, reached the final decision she did. Mr. Margetson might appropriately be billed as a third star of the genial piece.

An eavesdrapping and bibulous butler is played with a properly bogus dignity by Henry Mowbray and Augusta Dabney and Lyster Chambers make favorable impressions in the comparatively minor roles of the disillusioned Molly Asprey and Robert Crayle, the inevitable "friend of the family."

Philip Ober, as Foxx, last evening gave the impression of executing his important chore as the slightly caddish Foxx under strong wraps. His "repression" was carried to a point which seemed to these eyes and ears a shade out of key with the others.

Some Pruning Needed

"Another Love Story," at this point in its early life, has not reached the closely articulated perfection that it doubtless will attain before the week is out. There are intervals in the second act, and I have in mind especially the boudoir scene between Miss Lindsay and Mr. Ober in the second scene, when the spark seems monentarily to be lost, and there are other brief periods when interest lags in direct proportion to verbosity. Acceleration and the pruning knife can easily remedy both.

With the bright and tasteful settings provided by Raymond Sovey, the smart costuming of the feminine members of the cast and an all-around quality of engaging savoir faire, there is no reason to suspect that "Another Love Story" will not turn out to be one of the season's widely accepted weapons for killing a thoroughly enjoyable evening in the theater. Which, as I understand it, was the author's whole and only purpose.

FROM ITALY: "We're working like beavers. Life badly disrupted. Much more difficult than governing New York State. So-called bureaucracy at home is streamlined government, my friend. Love to the family"—Lieut. Col. Charles Poletti.

FROM A BATTLESHIP IN THE PACIFIC: "Your columns have been following me across the length and breadth of the Pacific, and I read the story of my new baby arriving. I had learned of it a few days earlier, and thereby hangs a tale. I heard of the event by means of a shortwave broadcast. The announcer interrupted a news broadcast and said that Mrs. Artie Shaw had given birth to a 7-pound baby girl. 'Artie Shaw,' he continued, 'is somewhere on one of the islands in the South Pacific. Anyone who happens to know where he is will please forward this information to him.' I spent over a week adjusting myself to the idea of having a daughter. I was all set. Then came another news flash, telling me, correctly, that it was a boy, not a girl. And this time, the announcer, bless him, referred to me as Lieutenant Shaw. Me, a bandmaster yet. Regards from your homesick, salty friend"—Bandmaster Artie Shaw.

VICTOR MATURE

FROM CHINA: "I envy anyone who drives through Rockland County these days, and I hope it won't be long before I'll take the drive myself again—one way, thank you. Alison is spending her summer there, making what she calls 'minor repairs' and what my bankbook probably will call 'rebuilding of house and surrounding countryside.' The county must be beautiful now—especially when compared with the countryside I've been seeing here—mostly covered with a foot or so of water, for the better production of rice and mosquitoes, redolent enough to delight the late Chic Sale. Best"—Sergt. Marion Hargrove.

FROM THE MURMANSK RUN: "Everyone can start relaxing back home now, since the Hunk is taking over. I am now a gun captain, and if I don't shoot myself first, then, according to my own kampf, I have Hitler on my list for February 13, at 2:30 p. m., or 14:30 as we say in the Coast Guard. May see you in a couple of months, if God grants same."—Victor Mature, Bos'n's Mate.

FROM PERSIA: "I'm writing this in a tent by wretched illumination. Outside, the troops are waiting to see our show, sitting on tin cans and lorries . . . The trip across was not too easy. We flew continuously, day and night, through the Egyptian Sudan, the Gold Coast, Nigeria, Libya, Arabia. At one African base Jack Benny and the rest of us were greeted with signs 'Down With Fred Allen' and 'Waukegan Airport.' The general in command liked our show, and as a result we now have our own plane, with two pilots and a flight surgeon. Jack and I saw the Sphinx. Its expression remained inscrutable.

"In the Tel Aviv we met Sergt. Irwin Shaw, and my report to him about the Broadway premiere of his play, 'Sons & Soldiers,' was the first he'd had. When I told him the audience had applauded long and loud, he growled: 'Dammit, why'd you tell me that? I thought the play folded because it was lousy. Now you tell me the audience liked it. I won't be able to sleep now' . . . At one recent base our stagehands were Italian prisoners . . . In Jerusalem I met the 82-year-old Henrietta Szold, who asked me: 'Why did you seek me out?' I told her: 'Because I read about you in Willkie's 'One World.' She answered: 'Then tell me—why did Willkie seek me out?' . . . Regards"—Larry Adler.

FROM NORTH AFRICA: "Here's something I came across the other day. Many of the boys here—especially those who live in towns—have purchased a 'Learn French Overnight' classic called 'Common French Phrases.' Among these 'common' phrases, like 'How far is it to the barber shop?' 'What time does the cinema begin?' etc., etc. We were startled to find one phrase: 'These boys are rope dancers from the south.' I can't wait for the chance to use it. Regards to Sylvia"—T/4 Robert Hopkins.

FROM "MALARIA MANOR": I don't know who told you of the teeth I lost in a foxhole at Rendova, and of the general's searching party which recovered them. There was reason for the mishap. It was one of the new Jap planes—the Mitsibushi Molar—and I expect by tomorrow the Army will call upon me for retarding the war effort by utilizing the services of four commissioned officers in the search. But the search was in self-defense. The general sometimes used the same foxhole—if he could beat me to it—and he was afraid he might meet a fate worse than a bomb splinter if he fell into the hole and my molars were there, eating side up. Regards"—J. Norman Lodge, A. P. War Correspondent.

HEDDA HOPPER

Don't 'Go Hollywood', America!

Hollywood, Calif., Sept. 27—One of Hollywood's greatest evils has now become a national menace. I'm speaking of that weakness of human nature that raises its standard of living with every increase in the pay check. . . . Many Hollywood stars of ten years ago, whose weekly checks were in four figures, are broke today. People are always saying, "How can that possibly be?" Well, it's because they didn't have character enough to maintain their normal standard of living when their pay check went sky high . . .

MAE WEST

Now many of our Nation's wage earners are getting more money than they ever dreamed of—with fewer luxuries to buy. . . . Have you ever sat in a crowded restaurant and heard someone say, "Don't look now, but I think that is so-and-so at that table back there"—and get a spasm in your neck until you can turn and take a look. Well, I'm saying, "Don't look now" — but thousands of people after this war is over will be regretting they spent all that money for things they didn't need instead of buying war bonds. . . . I picked up an 18-year-old boy in my car yesterday. He had just been offered a job at $82.50 a week, but didn't think he'd take it because his pal was making $110—and why should he. Well, I say our Nation's sense of values is all cockeyed. . . . Raising one's standard of living beyond necessities has become a national menace. Let's not buy anything we don't need. Invest the rest in war bonds.

Understand Mae West won't do Michael Todd's "Men in My Life." She begins another picture here in four weeks. Too bad she wasn't cast for "Belle of the Yukon." She'd be terrific. . . . Henry Morgan, doing William Saroyan's one-act play, "Hello, Out There," at the Playtime Theater, is definitely star material. When that was put on a couple of years ago at Santa Barbara, the girl opposite him was Jennifer Jones. . . . Jack Cummings tells me Basil Rathbone is doing a grand job as the menace in "Mr. Co-ed." It's his first musical, but it won't be his last.

Keep Coming

The Manuel Quezons have taken a year's lease on Marion Davies' house, recently vacated by the Cover Girls. They're a delightful addition to our community—incidentally, two Cover Girls are shopping for basinettes. . . . Twentieth Century is to be congratulated that the Treasury Department borrowed Ted Lloyd, who heads Twentieth Century's Eastern radio department. Ted was sent to the Coast for the bond rally and is doing a swell job. . . . The wife of one of our top airplane producers here is working as a welder in his competitor's plant under an assumed name.

When Red Skelton finished "Ubangis Will Win the War," he thought he's better get a man who knows his split infinitives and hanging participles, so persuaded a college professor to do an editorial job on it. He redid three chapters, sent it back with the comment, "It just wasn't worth anything." Now Red's bemoaning the fact he'll have to redo them because all his good gags were put into good English and nobody will understand them. . . . Erich Remarque, who settled his differences with the income tax office, returns to New York in a week.

Congress in Six Weeks to Receive Measure Implementing Vast War Relief Program

By Mary Spargo
Post Staff Writer

Within approximately six weeks both Houses of Congress will receive simultaneously an authorization bill to permit appropriations—as yet not even estimated—for the gigantic United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration, to aid in the recovery of war-torn areas.

The measure will be introduced in the Senate by the Foreign Relations Committee and in the House by the Foreign Affairs Committee. Chairman Bloom (Democrat) of New York of the Foreign Affairs Committee said yesterday the bill probably will be brought in directly after the agreement is signed by member nations at the White House November 9.

Senator Vandenberg (Republican) of Michigan said that all aspects of a treaty had been removed from the revised agreement made public September 20, and declared that under it the United States "is not entering into a single commitment."

No Specified Amounts

Informed sources in the House and at the State Department said it was not contemplated that the authorization bill itself would contain any specified appropriation. Chairman Cannon (Democrat) of Missouri, of the House Appropriations Committee, which will initiate legislation for funds for the administration if the organization is authorized, said it was possible the authorization bill might carry an "outside limit" on what appropriations might be granted. A State Department spokesman said that such a limit, if placed, would be written into the measure at the discretion of Congress.

Vandenberg said he believed the authorization bill would carry the full text of the agreement so that Congress in acting upon it would act also upon the agreement itself, thus meeting the objections of a number of critics.

So far as food is concerned, Cannon said that, speaking personally and not for his committee as a whole, he believed the appropriation measure might carry only enough to see war-stricken countries through their first year's crop, leaving them after that to produce their own food. It has been generally understood that devasted areas will not be in a position to restore agriculture without a considerable amount of aid for the first year, in any event.

To Encourage Production

Part of the plan of the United Nations relief and rehabilitation program is the encouragement of production.

Both the State Department and House legislative authorities agreed that no estimates of possible appropriations could be made at this time. The State Department said the matter was still in the hands of the Bureau of the Budget.

The sum, however, will unquestionably be very large, since not only food, but clothing, shelter, health, and arrangements for the return of prisoners and exiles also are involved.

Also included in the agreement is provision for assistance in the resumption of agriculture and industry, and the restoration of essential services.

Cannon said the United States would not bar the entire brunt of the expense, since the organization would operate on a basis of lend-lease, with each member contributing in proportion to its ability.

WACS Open New Recruit Campaign

A 10-week campaign to recruit 70,000 members for the Women's Army Corps, 350 of whom are sought from the District, was opened yesterday in front of the District Building.

Congresswoman Edith Nourse Rogers (Democrat) New York opened the ceremonies by lauding the work being done by the Corps and emphasized the need for its expansion.

Others on the program were Commissioner John Russell Young, Capt. Bernice Keplinger, WAC staff director of the Washington District; Brig. Gen. J. N. Dalton, director of personnel of the Army Service Forces; Mrs. James Clement Dunn, chairman of the Civilian WAC Recruiting Committee; Barbara Jane Smith, who explained WAC training and Sergt. Caroline York, a cousin of the Sergt. York of World War One fame.

Lawyer Becomes WAC

Pvt. Anne Christine Moe, WAC, who was formerly employed in the Dependents' Claim Services of the Veterans' Administration here, is classified as a lawyer working with bonds and dependency allotments at Camp Carson, Colo., according to word received here yesterday. Private Moe, a native of Oregon, entered the WAC July 2 and received her basic training at Fort Oglethorpe, Ga.

UMW $200,000 Worth

War bonds worth $200,000 were purchased yesterday by John L. Lewis in the name of the United Mine Workers, of which he is president, it was announced by Fred Flynn, chairman of the Alexandria Third War Loan Campaign.

The sale will be accredited to the Alexandria drive. Sales there now total $1,054,000 against a quota of $2,650,000.

Phillips Named President of Realty Board

Homer Phillips was elected president of the Washington Real Estate Board succeeding Claud Livingston at the annual meeting of the board at the Wardman Park Hotel last night.

Phillips, a member of the firm of Phillips & Canby, had formerly served as vice president and as a member of the board of directors. He lives at Harvard Hall, 1650 Harvard st. nw.

Other officers elected are Lewis T. Breuninger, first vice president; S. Dolan Donohoe, second vice president; G. Edward Altemus, Edward R. Carr, E. H. Croxton, Paul O. Drury, Claud Livingston and Oliver M. Walker, board of directors.

A gavel was presented to the outgoing president by former president H. Clifford Banks. The treasurer's report was issued by Charles J. Rush.

The group heard talks by William Johnson, representing the War Community Fund, a businessman who had lived in China for 36 years, and Emmett J. Sheehan, representing the Third War Loan.

2 'Heels' Far Apart, Adamson Warns

New York, Sept. 27 (AP).—Col. Hans Adamson, who spent 21 days on a raft with Capt. Edward Rickenbacker after a plane crash in the Pacific, said yesterday hard fighting lay ahead of Allied armies. He told a patriotic meeting:

"It's a long march from the heel of Italy to the heel in Berlin."

Curley Pleads Not Guilty

Representative James M. Curley, (Democrat), of Massachusetts, casually said, "Not guilty, I guess that's what I'm supposed to say," when arraigned yesterday in District Court on charges of conspiracy and mail fraud in the activities of the Engineer's Group, Inc., in "negotiations" for war contracts.

Curley was arraigned along with Donald Wakefield Smith, former National Labor Relations Board member; Marshall J. Fitzgerald, a lobbyist, and James B. Underwood, Greek Air-force captain on furlough. All pleaded innocent.

Two others under the indictment will be arraigned Friday.

They are James Fuller, now serving a five-year jail term for sending fraudulent securities through the mails, and Bertram Hall, of Dallas, Tex.

Roy C. Frank, special assistant to the Attorney General, asked that preliminary matters be expedited so the case can be brought to trial early in November. The defendants were given two weeks to file any necessary motions or demurrers.

Curley refused to make any statement to the press and refused to allow a picture to be taken. He left the court by a rear exit, while photographers waited for him in the front.

Nicholas Chase entered his appearance for Curley, but said he did not know who would represent the Congressman. It appeared probable that Curley would have one of Washington's prominent criminal lawyers, William E. Leahy, with whom Chase is associated.

Funeral Thursday For T. J. Gorman, Federal Employe

Funeral services for Thomas J. Gorman, veteran of 43 years' service in the Federal Government, who died yesterday in Miami, Fla., will be held Thursday at 9 a. m. in the Sacred Heart Church. Burial will be in Mount Olivet Cemetery. S. H. Hines Co. is in charge of arrangements.

After serving the Government in various capacities since 1900, Mr. Gorman became head of the Investigations and Patrol Division of the Treasury Department in 1930, when this group was battling rum-running and smuggling gangs.

The deceased was an ardent boatman and golfer. He was a member of Kenwood Golf and Country Club. He lived at 2800 Ontario rd. nw.

He leaves a daughter, Mrs. T. Richard Dougherty of Miami; a son, Lieut. Thomas J. Gorman, jr., of the Coast Guard, and a brother, Rear Admiral Frank J. Gorman of the Coast Guard, who lives at 4550 Connecticut ave. nw.

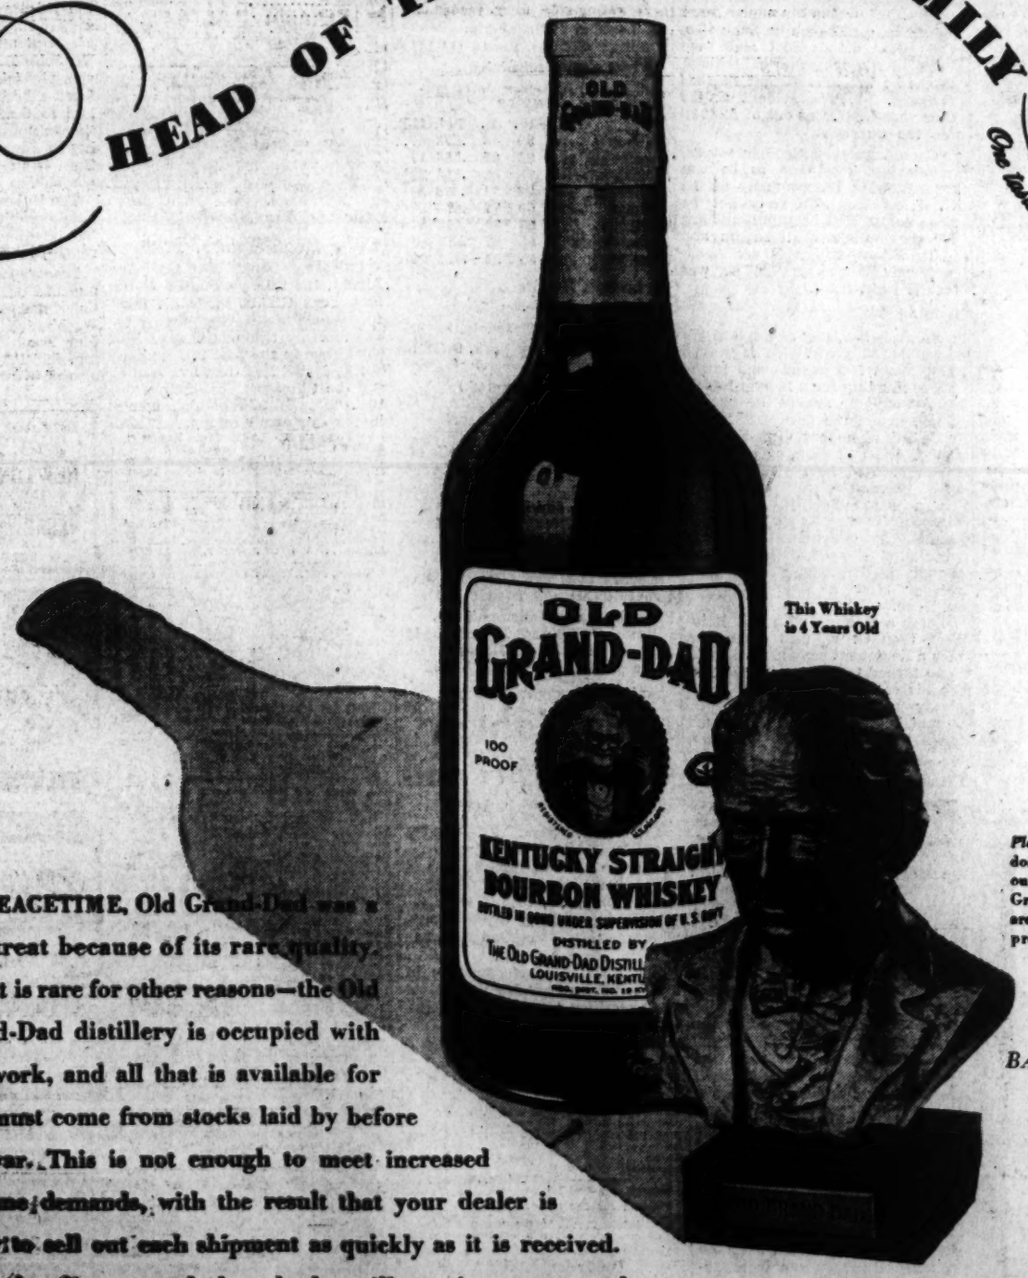
HEAD OF THE BOURBON FAMILY
One taste will tell you why



This Whiskey is 4 Years Old

IN PEACETIME, Old Grand-Dad was a rare treat because of its rare quality. Now it is rare for other reasons—the Old Grand-Dad distillery is occupied with war work, and all that is available for sale must come from stocks laid by before the war. This is not enough to meet increased wartime demands, with the result that your dealer is likely to sell out each shipment as quickly as it is received. Don't be discouraged though; he will receive more, and your patience in asking for it again and again will in due time be rewarded.

Please be patient. We're doing our best to spread our prewar stocks of Old Grand-Dad fairly—as we are now engaged in war production of alcohol.

BACK THE ATTACK —BUY MORE WAR BONDS

National Distillers Products Corporation, New York

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

We pledge this as the last discussion in this space of the origin of football's spinner play. Our head is spinning from the violence and volume of the mail ever since the spinner became a topic in these columns, and how are you holding up?

POVICH

At this point we say a plague on the whole business, including our own foolish attempt to pin the spinner down to one coach or one era. The difference between a debate and a football argument is that a debate sometimes ends. A football argument is deathless. Nobody ever graduates from a football school of thought.

But in justice to Tommy Devine of the UP whom we took to task for what we called his gullibility in falling for the story that Coach Fritz Crisler originated the spinner play at Minnesota in 1931, he ought to be heard in rebuttal. Incidentally, this department executes a neat spin at this point and retracts the suggestion that Curly Byrd invented the spinner at Maryland University in the early twenties.

That statement started the deluge of violent dissenters. Football men brought forth affidavites that they saw the spinner play as early as 1908-09, and suspected that it was an old play in that era. But we hear Devine out:

"Dear Shirley," he writes, "I usually wait until late in the football season before I get horribly messed up in a controversy, but it looks like I beat par for the course this season.

"All in all, it appears that my writing is as baffling as Crisler's spinner because, honest, there was a qualifying phrase in the story which should make all other inventors of the spinner play happy. The third paragraph in my story read 'Crisler is a devotee of a dazzling offensive formula that has as its key the spinner play. He is the game's greatest exponent of this grid style and it was through a mistake of a player 13 years ago that he chanced upon his version of the spinner.' Please note 'his version.'

"All precinct counts aren't in so doubtlessly there'll be more claimants of 'spinner honors.' Out this way in Chicago you know it used to be common practice to credit all football play inventions to Bob Zupke of Illinois and Fielding Yost of Michigan. Being gentlemen of generous natures they then would split the 'loot' fifty-fifty and be satisfied. I tried to get Zup on his farm near Champaign, Ill., to see if he really invented the spinner, but the line was busy.

"Out here we never knew of Dr. H. C. (Curly) Byrd as a spinner man. We thought he was the gentleman who had the buck passed to him when that traveling man, Clark Shaughnessy, took a liking to the looks of Pittsburgh's coal.

"I don't question that there were other spinner men before Crisler, but I think that some place under the Four Freedoms my man should have the right to come up with 'his version' of the play. I'm suggesting that you can continue to boost Dr. Byrd as a spinner man, though, because in the swivel chair of a college president's office, a successful spinner should be simple for him."

We accept Tommy Devine's apologies, in trade for our own, which looks like a shrewd deal on our part, inasmuch as Devine, it seems has nothing to apologize for. Certainly every coach is entitled to his version of the spinner play, which was all that Devine was reporting.

However, it did touch off a fine rhubarb and Francis Powers of the Chicago News raises his voice to declaim that neither Crisler nor Byrd originated the spinner. The daddy of the play, says Powers, was Hugo Bezdek, who used to coach around Penn State in the early years of the century.

We've heard now from Buck O'Neill, who claims that Pop Warner first installed the spinner with the Carlisle Indians back in '08, and from Jim Pixlee, who says that he played on Missouri teams using the spinner in 1914. One correspondent suggests very emphatically that Dan McGuigin was using the spinner at Vanderbilt before 1910, and that McGuigin doubtless learned it from Yost at Michigan. There are others who claim to have used the play and played against it as long as 40 years ago. It has certainly been an enduring play.

But now we hear there was nothing new about the spinner play back in the middle '90s, honest. So says Mr. Dan T. Haddock of the Washington Loan & Trust Building, who writes: The writer was fullback on the Carnegie Steel team at Duquesne, Pa., in 1897 and we used the spinner constantly and effectively . . . we also had what is now called the T formation, which is another style claimed to have been developed by certain coaches, particularly at Notre Dame . . . one of the players on our team was the late Jack Greenway, famous Yale end who later became aide de camp to Col. Theodore Roosevelt in the Spanish-American War . . . one of the tackles was Eugene Messler, also of Yale, now a retired steel man in Pittsburgh and I may say, in passing, that I have not seen a better tackle in the years since."

And now, as for the spinner play, signals off!

White Sox Win Pair of 2-1 Games From Nats

Maltzberger Twice Star In Relief Role

Newsom, Leonard Beaten as Nats' Errors Hurt Both; Chisox Are Outhit

By Shirley Povich
Post Staff Writer

The Nats were inept, inadequate and repetitious last night. Their unhappy sameness took the form of two 2-to-1 beatings by the White Sox at Griffith Stadium.

The pattern was the same in each game. The Nats outhit the White Sox in both contests with identically dismal results. When, in each game, the Nats got the tying and winning runs on base in the eighth inning, skinny Gordon Maltzberger ambled out of the Chicago bullpen, went to the mound, and quelled the excitement.

Buck Newsom was the victim of both the Nats and the White Sox in that second game. Until he was relieved for a pinch hitter in the eighth, he allowed only three hits in his duel with Orval Grove. He shut the Sox out with one hit after the second inning, but it was all very futile. The unearned run that stemmed from a muff by Mickey Vernon licked Newsom.

Spence Homers

Dutch Leonard was the White Sox' victim in the first game. He held the Sox to seven hits while the Nats were collecting 10, but Stan Spence's drive over the right field wall in the eighth was the only run they could stir up for Leonard.

It was a painful double beating for the Nats whose grip on second place dwindled to three games.

The George Case-Wally Moses battle for the base-stealing championship was static last night. Case was out of the Nats' line-up with a painfully bruised thigh, and Moses stole no bases in the twin bill, leaving Case still in the van, 56-55.

Newsom's wildness gave the Sox an important run in the first inning of the second game. He walked the first two men to face him and a run scored on Curtright's safe bunt and an infield out.

The Sox took a 2-0 lead in the second inning after Vernon fumbled a throw from Sullivan with two out. Moses got the run home with a triple over Powell's head.

The Nats made only one hit off Grove in the first five innings. In the eighth they averted a shut-out but muffed a chance to tie the score. After Jake Early led off with a single, pinch runner George Myatt got himself picked off first base. It was a brutal break for the Nats because Sullivan followed with a single, and pinch hitter Wynn was safe on Hodgin's error. Jake Powell got a run home with a single to left but after Grove walked Vernon to fill the bases with two out Maltzberger relieved Grove.

Moore Pops Up

He lured Moore into hitting a pop fly and it was over. Just to make sure, Maltzberger struck out three Nats in the ninth.

In the first game, the Sox took a 1-0 lead against Leonard when Hodgin led off the fourth with a double and scored all the way from second on Kuhel's smash off Vernon's glove.

Spence hit the ball over the right-field wall with one out and none on in the sixth to tie the score at 1-1.

The Sox got the winning run in the eighth after Moses led off with a single. A bit later, after an intentional pass to Appling, Hodgin singled to right to make it 2-1.

The Nats drove Buck Ross off the mound in the eighth but got nothing. Powell led off with a single to left, but Vernon flied out and then Powell went out stealing. Moore walked and Spence moved him to third with a single, but mean old Maltzberger came in and got rid of Robertson on a pop-up.

Yankees Win, 5-2; Etten and Borowy Star

By the Associated Press

New York, Sept. 27.—Nick Etten took a liking to the pitching of Rookie Allee Reynolds today and spoiled what might have been a good ball game between the New York Yankees and Cleveland Indians.

The big first sacker hit his fourteenth homer, a three-run double and a single, to bat in four runs and propel the Yankees to a 5-to-2 triumph, although Reynolds and Joe Heving gave up only six hits, one more than allowed by Hank Borowy of New York.

Borowy's fourteenth victory and sixth straight never was in doubt because Charley Keller singled a run across in the first inning and Etten took charge thereafter with his homer in the second stanza and his base-clearing double in the fifth.

Seno Proved Sunday What His Backers Had Been Saying About Him Right Along

By Merrell W. Whittlesey
Post Staff Writer

While Frank Seno, the Redskins' star rookie halfback, was speeding 62 yards against the Chicago Cardinals in Buffalo Sunday his two greatest boosters were having a time of it trying to root him over the goal line.

On a chair next to the Redskin bench mild-mannered Sid Carroll, general manager of the 'Skins, lost his dignity for a moment and was on the edge of his chair, waving his arms wildly and yelling at the top of his voice.

At his home listening to the radio, according to an eyewitness account, George Washington University Trainer George Lentz was on the floor, pounding the hardwood with his fist and yelling, "Come on, Frank." The neighbors almost called the cops.

They Think He's Good

Seno, who resigned from G. W. last year in the midst of his sophomore term, now commands new respect in the Redskin camp and you'll pardon Carroll and Lentz if they sound out a loud, "I told you so." They've been talking Seno since last spring and if you believe them the 22-year-old Illinois youngster is going to be one of the best backs in the league.

Lentz, a faithful supporter of any athlete ever to wear a G W. uniform since transferring to the Colonials from Catholic University, where he worked under Dutch Bergman, sold Dutch on Seno after the latter quit school and went back to his Mendota (Ill.) home, where he was an assistant railroad foreman. It was evident at the time that G. W. was out of football for the duration.

Carroll watched Seno in several games last year, and as he was frequently in the company of the G. W. coaching staff he caught the Seno habit. He's been pulling hard for the youngster all season and in the Navy scrimmage and again yesterday it was proven he was on the right track.

Baby of the Squad

Frank is the baby of the Redskin squad at 22 years. He is just 6 feet, packs 185 pounds and if the 'Skins lined up for a 100-yard dash, Seno would be among the first to finish, if not the first.

He gained honorable mention on the Illinois All-State scholastic team twice at Mendota High and was three-time all conference. There he ran the ball, passed and kicked. On the Redskins he will confine his offensive duties to running the ball at present although he'll probably turn pass catcher after a little more experience.

After a meeting with Bill Reinhart, then G. W. grid coach and now a lieutenant commander, USN, Seno turned to George Washington for his college career after being highly recommended by G. W. alumni in the Midwest. He heard from Georgetown and Clemson, too, but preferred G. W.

Freshman Standout

Seno was a freshman standout on the Colonial yearling eleven but they only played a few games. Last year, his first on the varsity, the Colonials had their troubles. They only won three games but in their only major victory, over Clemson, Seno was the star. He alternated at fullback and halfback with Frank Bernot and Jimmy Graham. The latter, now in the Marines, is playing third string at Penn State.

Seno played a small part in the Redskins' early drills. He'll tell you he expected to be cut from the squad any day but they brought him back East and he was in the Packer game for a few plays. Finally in the Navy scrimmage Frank got his chance. His first time in the test he was excited and missed his chance but Bergman put him back and he ran the Middies dizzy.

Sunday, with the Redskins in possession of a 17-0 lead over the Cardinals, Bergman ran in a second club with Seno at right half. On one of the first plays the Cards scored on a pass in the end zone, to Seno's man. After the kickoff Seno was to take the ball but he fumbled and the Cards recovered and scored on the next play. Cards Happy After White Beats Braves

By the Associated Press

St. Louis, Sept. 27.—The World Champion Cardinals were a happy lot today concerning their 6-to-3 triumph over Boston. The game showed Southpaw Ernie White is trotting along the comeback trail.

White, who shut out the Yankees in the 1942 fall classic, suffered bursitis in the shoulder this summer. Idle for a period, he made a comeback start a week ago, but was knocked out in four innings.

He went the whole route today, and while Big Ernie was nicked for 10 hits, he struck out six while walking four batters.

The young southpaw was helped handily by home runs off the bats of Ray Sanders and Danny Litwhiler, each time with a man on

Garner Loses To Williams On Decision

Capacity Crowd Sees District Boy, Floored in Sixth, Suffer 1st Defeat

By Al Costello
Post Staff Writer

John Garner, who holds the impressive sounding titles of District lightheavy and middleweight champion, stepped out of his class last night at Turner's Arena and, as class always tells, went down to his first professional defeat before the talented Holman Williams, Chicago veteran in 10 never-close rounds.

A paid attendance of 2218, which paid a startling gross gate of $3796, plus a couple of hundred more deadheads, taxed Turner's Arena to capacity and left a hundred or so more fans outside futilely clamoring for admittance.

In dropping his first decision after 14 previous starts, Garner was outclassed by the protege of Joe Louis, who was recording his 110th victory in 120 starts. Williams hit Johnny with every punch in the books and a few more besides. In the final capitulation, Williams won eight rounds from here to China, while the other two, by liberal scoring, would have gone to the District boy.

Garner Floored

Williams used a stabbing left and turned it into a slashing left hook to the mid-section for five rounds, almost neglecting his right. When he finally cut loose with a short right hand in the sixth that exploded on Garner's chin after a flight of no more than 6 inches, Garner went down to take a nine count. From there on Holman used both hands freely, favoring the left hook to the tummy, however, while Garner, except for an occasional flurry, hardly laid a glove on the Chicagoan.

Garner, against first-class opposition, abandoned his clownish tactics and proved he could take it by getting up after Williams landed his terrific shot in the fifth. He tried to make a fight of it and was pitching all the way, but the wily Williams just wasn't where Garner was throwing punches most of the time, making Johnny miss much more often than he landed. Garner weighed 165 to 158½ for Williams. After weighing in at 167 early yesterday, Garner was made to sweat off the extra two pounds, according to the signed articles.

It was merely a case of too much class and too little experience.

Latsios Winner

Nick Latsios, 145, Bolling Field soldier formerly of Alexandria, was given a technical kayo over Taffy Cummings, 141½, of the Royal British Navy after one minute of the third round when Cummings suffered a bad cut on the back of his head after an accidental butt. Dr. John Demayo, boxing commission physician, said Cummings suffered a broken artery and ordered him to Garfield Hospital for further examination. Latsios was leading by a comfortable margin at the time. It was Nick's twelfth straight pro victory without defeat.

Tee Hubert, 163, D. C., slowed up but couldn't stop Speedy Duvall, 157, Baltimore, in the main six-round preliminary.

Frankie Gilliam, 143, Baltimore, punched out an easy six-round victory over Jimmy McGriff, 141, Washington, and in the opening four Young Sloane, 138, Washington, decisioned George Ferrell, 139, also of Washington.

Bucky Harris' Father Dies At Dover, N. J.

By the Associated Press

Dover, N. J., Sept. 27.—Police Judge Thomas Harris, father of Stanley R. "Bucky" Harris, until recently manager of the Philadelphia Phillies, died today in his home here.

The elder Harris, who held the judgeship since 1937, had been a baseball pitcher in his youth and played near Scranton, Pa., with the late Christy Mathewson.

Harris had been an inspector of police for the Delaware, Lackawanna & Western Railroad in the Hoboken and Buffalo, N. Y., offices, a patrolman in Port Jervis, N. Y., and a detective for the Erie Railroad.

Surviving are his widow, Margaret, two other sons, Gordon L. of Dover and Merl of Pittston, Pa., a manager of baseball and basket ball teams near Wilkes-Barre, Pa.

Women Golfers Seek NBC Cup

Low handicap players of the District Women's Golf Association will bring their season to a close today in the Class A NBC Cup Tournament at Washington Golf and Country Club with a field of 60, largest of the season.

Today is also the second entry closing date for the Times-Herald Class B Tournament which will be played Friday at Kenwood. The event was originally to have been played last week but was postponed due to rain.

Browns Purchase Pofahl From Nats

St. Louis, Sept. 27 (AP). — The Browns have bought Infielder Jimmy Pofahl from the Washington Nationals and Outfielder Harold Epps from Toledo, General Manager Bill DeWitt said today.

Pofahl, on option to Minneapolis this season, will report next spring. Epps, a Brownie farmhand, reports today.

Injury of Cards' Goldberg Serious

Buffalo, N. Y., Sept. 27 (AP).—Marshall Goldberg, veteran Chicago Cardinal halfback, will be lost to his team at least four weeks and possibly six as the result of a fractured ankle, in the opinion of Dr. Edward Lyons of Buffalo.

Goldberg, former University of Pittsburgh All-American and a member of the Cardinals for five seasons, suffered the injury yesterday as the Chicago team lost to the Washington Redskins.

Floyd Rhea, Cardinal guard, will be out for the season as the result of a compression fracture of a dorsal vertebrae received in the game, Dr. Lyons added.

Billy Southworth Signs 1944 Papers

St. Louis, Sept. 27 (AP).—Manager Billy Southworth signed a contract today to pilot the St. Louis Cardinals for 1944.

President Sam Breadon did not disclose the salary terms.

Southworth became the Cardinals' manager in June, 1940, and last year guided the Red Birds to their first world championship since 1934. The Cards won their second consecutive National League pennant September 18.

Only 6 Eligible Horses are Available for Pimlico Special

'Dream Race' Hard Hit by Misfortunes

Riverland, Count Fleet Other Stars Missing; Field Is Still Open, However

By the Associated Press

Baltimore, Sept. 27.—Misfortunes of racing and training which have dogged thoroughbred ranks this year threatened again today to reduce to vest pocket size the field for the seventh Pimlico Special, the race which Lieut. Alfred Gwynn Vanderbilt devised as a race of champions.

The invitational event, whose winner-take-all purse was boosted this year from $10,000 to $25,000, will be run on October 30 at Pimlico during the four Maryland tracks' consolidated meeting, and only 6 of the 12 eligible horses today could be listed as even possible starters.

May Invite Others

Two qualifying races remain to be run—the Lawrence Realization tomorrow and the Washington Handicap on October 23, and in addition the Maryland Jockey Club reserves the right to invite "any horse of outstanding merit."

It was in 1941 that Vanderbilt, then Pimlico's president, set up the conditions under which the Special is now run. Invitations are issued to the winners of 24 of the biggest races of the American turf.

Six of those races were not renewed this year, and 12 horses won the 16 remaining ones already run. But death and training mishaps have eliminated six from the mile and three-sixteenths, weight-for-age race. With more than a month to go, chances are that the field will be reduced still further.

Few Remain

Of the eligibles, the only ones now in training are Louis B. Mayer's Thumbs Up, winner of the Butler and Washington Park Handicaps; Mrs. W. S. Farish's Royal Nap, which deadheated Thumbs Up in the latter race; W. E. Boeing's Slide Rule, winner of the Arlington classic; Hal Price Headley's Askmenow, American Derby winner and the first filly ever to become eligible for the Special; Townsend B. Martin's Bolingbroke, winner of the Whitney, and Havahome Stable's Eurasian, Travers winner.

Of the others which won qualifying races, Riverland is dead; Count Fleet, Don Bingo, Vincentive and Devil Diver have been retired for the season, and Market Wise appears to be sidelined by the cut he received in the Narragansett Special.

Only one horse—Whirlaway—showed up for last year's renewal to take down the biggest purse ever won in a walkover. The previous year, only two went to the post, Market Wise defeating Halt'al.

Only 714 See Tigers Win, 6-3, on Homers

By the Associated Press

Boston, Sept. 27.—Home runs by Dick Wakefield and Paul Richards, each of which accounted for two runs, gave the Detroit Tigers a 6-3 victory over the Boston Red Sox today as only 714 fans sat in at the contest.

The attendance was the smallest that the Red Sox have played to at Fenway Park since Owner Tom Yawkey took over the team in 1933.

Wakefield's circuit clout came in the first off Dick Newsome and Richards came through with his four-bagger in the eighth to improve a slim 4-3 lead which Virgil Trucks was holding at that point. It was the fourteenth victory of the season for Trucks, who fanned eight Sox batsmen.

Sharkey Faces Greek George

Babe Sharkey, the bruising Texas giant who won last week from Cowboy Luttrell via disqualification, has been matched against Tom George, a Greek grappler, in a 30-minute bout on tomorow night's wrestling show at Turner's Arena. The headliners are Maurice LaChappelle, the French-Canadian star, and Dr. John Bonika, the Boston medica, who will meet in a battle of science.

Another match closed out yesterday brings together Dick Craddock, a local boy, and Jim Stefano, Philadelphia shipyard worker.

Abe Stein, New York villain, and Cowboy Luttrell will clash in the semiwindup, while a couple of Johnnies—Johnny Long and Johnny Melas—will meet in a special 30-minute scrap.

Baseball's Fathers Are Headed For 1-A Draft, Officials Say

Baseball is not ground for occupational deferment, Selective Service Headquarters said yesterday, and baseball players of draft age who are fathers will be classified 1-A when their order numbers are reached, unless there other reasons for deferment such as extreme hardship to dependents or physical defects, the Associated Press reported.

Baseball is in the no man's land between the list of essential industries and the list of non-deferable occupations.

Headquarters declined to estimate how seriously the new father-draft regulations will affect professional baseball, but it was made clear that players between 18 and 38 who have been deferred because of dependency have no assurance of staying out of the armed forces after October 1, when dependency ceases to be a ground for deferment.

Draft officials were asked to clarify the baseball situation because of the case of Al Zarilla, the St. Louis Browns, who was classified 1-A by his Los Angeles draft board. He is married and has a 3-year-old daughter. A club official said today Zarilla has left the Browns to report to a California war job.

Seno 'Skins' New Backfield Threat

came Seno and the Redskin reserves and as he banged his helmet to the turf Frank figured he was through.

But the Redskin first-stringers ran up another comfortable lead and Seno & Co. went back into the ball game. Twice, on a punt and kick-off, Seno took the ball and returned it 30 yards each time in impressive fashion.

Midway in the fourth period Seno took the ball on his own 36-yard line. He sped outside, cut back with the finesse of a veteran and legged it 62 yards before he was brought down on the 2. Two plays later he smashed the Cardinal line for a touchdown.

The youngster has a lot of work to do on defensive but Lentz and Carroll have added two members to the Seno admiration society in Redskin Coaches Bergman and Turk Edwards. Bergman admits Seno needs a lot of work but says Frank has the makings.

With a 4-F standing in the draft, Seno is almost certain to stick for the season. The Brooklyn Dodgers cast eyes at him already and Tuffy Leemans, the New York Giants coach, was moaning to Lentz last week about "why didn't you send him to me."

It's Frank Seno, don't forget. The Redskins have a Joe Zeno but he's a tackle. Last year Frank was getting mixed up with Enrico Seeno at G. W. But at his present pace he'll probably make quite a name for himself.

NOTES—Although credit was given Redskin Capt. Bob Masterson for blocking a Cardinal punt Sunday, the only one in the game, it was Joe Zeno who played a standout game at tackle, who actually blocked the kick, Masterson, incidentally, had a good day without the block. . . . George Smith's two touchdowns with intercepted passes just doubled his previous total in five years with the 'Skins. His first, and last until yesterday, was in Dallas in 1937 when he scored on an interception to beat the Chicago Bears. . . . Wilbur Moore came out of the Cardinal game with a slight rib injury. Andy Farkas and Joe Aguirre will undergo treatments for muscular ailments. . . . The Redskins will resume workouts today at College Park and will be introduced to something new in the way of offense. . . . The vets are hungry for the first league game after practicing and playing exhibitions since late July.

Roosevelt High Anacostia Set For Spotlight

Anacostia High School, which Zuzu Stewart has made the outstanding threat of the District schoolboy grid series, will meet Roosevelt High at Central Stadium at 2 p. m. Saturday in the spot game of the week, Dallas Shirley, director of physical education, announced last night.

The selection of Anacostia and Roosevelt came as the result of the Southeast team's decisive 19-6 victory over favored Central last Friday and Roosevelt's defeat, 15-7, of Eastern. The spot games for Saturday play will be selected each week on the basis of the previous week's results.

Regular games of the series will be played Friday, with Coolidge, which upset Wilson last Friday, playing at Tech, which last week was beaten by Western, and the defeated Wilson and Central teams meeting at Central. Eastern will play Episcopal High at Alexandria on Saturday, and Western will meet the strong Washington-Lee Generals in Arlington on Friday. Devitt Prep will start its heavy but untested team against Staunton Military Academy at Staunton, Va., Saturday.

Rep. Vorys to Speak To Touchdown Club

The Touchdown Club at its regular weekly luncheon today will hear a talk by Representative John M. Vorys (Republican) of Ohio and a member of the House Foreign Affairs Committee.

Rep. Magnuson To Force FCC Showdown

ings were to continue during the summer.

By that time, he added, he had already made plans, and he could not return to the East to attend the hearings.

Magnuson is one of three Democrats on the committee. In practice, Chairman Cox and the two Republican members were understood to have stood on one side on tests of policy, with Magnuson and Representative Hart (Democrat) of New Jersey in the minority.

Magnuson's projected protest against committee policies was coincident with, rather than a development from, demands that Chairman Cox be ousted from the committee.

Silent on That Angle

On that proposal Magnuson would not comment. Nor would leading members of the House, from Speaker Rayburn (Democrat) of Texas on down, discuss on the record the petition of FCC Commissioner Durr for Cox's ouster as a committee member, or The Post editorial request for Speaker Rayburn to take the lead in obtaining a House decision on Durr's demand.

There were no plans yesterday for House action on the petition, it was learned.

The petition had been shunted into a House Judiciary pigeonhole. Judiciary Chairman Sumners (Democrat) of Texas had informed Durr that the "general" opinion in his committee was that it lacked jurisdiction to deal with the petition.

Rayburn's Position

Speaker Rayburn, it was understood, was placed by the rules of the House in this position:

As Speaker, he appoints the membership of a special committee like that headed by Representative Cox. Once the members are appointed, however, the committee is the agent of the House. Removal of a member is regarded as the right of the whole House, not of the Speaker. Only the House could remove Representative Cox from the chairmanship or membership on the committee.

Despite the ruling of Representative Sumners that the Judiciary Committee lacked jurisdiction, Speaker Rayburn was understood to regard the petition as having been properly referred there.

Speaker Rayburn, however, would not comment for the present on the petition or The Post editorial. Other leading House members indicated they felt themselves bound to follow the lead of the Speaker and let the first response come from him.

Local Sale of War Plants Advocated by Jones

By the Associated Press

Local business should get the first postwar call for buying the Government's vast war plants and converting them to the private manufacture of peacetime goods, Jesse Jones, Federal Loan administrator, told the House Small Business Committee yesterday.

The Reconstruction Finance Corp. which he heads will be ready to finance war plant sales to private industry, he said.

"I don't think the Government should manufacture things for civilian requirements," Jones said. "But these plants should not be sacrificed or junked. By and large they can be used for manufacturing things necessary to our peacetime economy."

Contractors May Buy

Many of the deals under which the plants were built contain options which give war contractors the right to buy them after the war, he said.

"But local people should have the first call," he continued. "I don't think we should permit the war to further concentrate our economy in big units. We're better off with small units."

Jones gave the committee a breakdown of the Government's huge investment in industrial plants geared to war production. Through their operation, he said, there is no shortage of any strategic materials needed for the war.

Orderly Disposal Asked

Orderly disposal of all nonperishable surplus war goods through established retail channels was advocated before the committee yesterday by the National Automobile Dealers Association as a means of putting thousands of small merchants "back on their feet."

David E. Castles, St. Louis, president of the association, said the promiscuous and unplanned "dumping" of surplus stocks "would lead to chaos in the retail field and would be unfair to taxpayers."

He estimated the stock pile of surplus goods would be worth 50 billion dollars at the end of the war.

"If these goods are sold in hit-and-miss fashion at sacrifice prices like so much junk in a back lot," he declared, "the taxpayers will lose vast amounts of money and every retail line represented in the surplus will be seriously injured by a rush of speculators to cash in on their bargain purchases."

Asthma Mucus Fought Easy Way

Choking, gasping, wheezing, recurring attacks of Bronchial Asthma ruin your sleep and rob your blood of vitally important oxygen because you can't get air in and out of your lungs properly. But now it is no longer necessary to suffer from these terrible attacks without the benefit you may receive from a physician's prescription called Mendaco. Within a very short time after the first dose, Mendaco ingredients start circulating thru the blood, thus reaching the smallest as well as the largest Bronchial tubes where they usually quickly help liquefy, loosen and remove thick strangling mucus (phlegm), thereby promoting freer breathing and more restful sleep. In fact, Mendaco has proved so successful in helping thousands of sufferers from recurring spasms of Bronchial Asthma that it is sold under a guarantee of money back unless completely satisfactory. So get Mendaco from your druggist today for only 60c.

W. C. Becker Dies; Funeral Services To Be Held Today

Masonic services for William C. Becker, 46, for 20 years a Commerce Department employe, will be held today at 2 p. m. at the W. Reuben Pumphrey funeral home, 7357 Wisconsin ave., Bethesda, Md. Burial will be in Arlington National Cemetery.

Mr. Becker, a World War veteran died Saturday following a heart attack at his home, 5410 Allan rd., Westgate, Md.

A native of Baltimore, where he was educated, Mr. Becker moved to Montgomery County six years ago. He lived in Washington several years.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Edna Bell Talbot Becker; a daughter, Barbara Becker; and a sister, Mrs. Anna Will, of Baltimore.

union, is submitting an appeal, but what is in it, I don't know."

Curran recently was reclassified from 2-A, an essential civilian status, to 1-A. His local board gave him until today to submit new evidence, pointing out that since there was a dissenting vote on the Appeals Board, he had the right to appeal to President Roosevelt.

Draft officials said Curran had left the country without notifying his local board.

French to Appoint Minister of War

Algiers, Sept. 27 (AP).—The French Committee of National Liberation today yielded to Gen. Charles de Gaulle and decided to appoint a minister of war who will bear the title of commissioner of national defense to insure subordination of military to civil authority.

Heretofore, military authority has been represented by Gen. Henri Giraud, French commander in chief.

Adrian Tixier, commissioner for labor, probably will be chosen.

Only a woman can tell this story . . .

THERE must be thousands of women like me . . . with a brother in the service and a husband on the home front. And if your husband is like my Jim, you know as surely as I do, that he'd much rather be out there getting in his personal licks against the Japs and the Jerries. But—he has me and our children to think about.

My Jim is no talker. He's never hinted this to me. But I know it—because I know there is not much difference between men like my brother who enlisted before Pearl Harbor and men like my Jim who is doing the best he can here at the plant. It's just that Jim is older and has others to care for. They both feel the same.

Yes, there must be thousands and thousands of plain, garden-variety Americans that the men on the front never hear about . . . Americans who are backing them up just as surely as though they both were fighting side-by-side.

And we're going to need both kinds—still fighting side-by-side—for the next big job ahead—making this the last world war and building the kind of world we're all fighting to create for ourselves and our children.

The men and women of Weatherhead sponsored this message. Most of us have near relatives in uniform . . . sons, husbands, brothers . . . sisters and daughters, too. Our task is not dramatic . . . but it is vital to every single big weapon. For years we have been making for peacetime purposes the same fittings and devices we are making today. However, responding to the urgent war needs of the nation, we have found ways of producing them in greater quantity than ever before—more than a million every twenty-four hours! So, you see, our skill is also one of the great weapons for winning the war and for building the kind of world we're all fighting for.

And No Overtime Pay

The University of Maryland department of agricultural economics disclosed that farmers are putting in longer hours these days than are their hired help. Dr. S. H. Devault reported that farm operators were working an average of 13.1 hours a day; hired men an average of 10 or 10.5 hours per day.

Objection Sustained

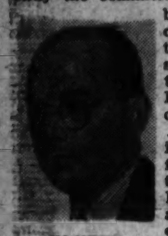
Philadelphia.—Women workers objected when posters in a war plant blamed all the bottlenecks on "Simple Sal." The plant cartoonist is co-starring "Witless Willie" now.

The Federal Diary

By Jerry Kluttz

Investigators Eyeing WLB Jurisdiction

The War Labor Board is being given the once-over by the Smith Investigating Committee. Apparently the committee believes the board has exceeded its authority in assuming jurisdiction over alations Board of labor dispute. . . . Promoted in the legal office at the National Labor Relatoins Board are Guy Farmer and Malcolm Halliday, associate general counsel, and Ivar Peterson, assistant general counsel. Each of the apointees has been with the board at least five years . . . . Robert Clark won the employe election at War Manpower and a seat on the efficiency rating appeals board. His alternate is Ed Gallagher.



KLUTTZ

Joe Rupley, former personnel director at the Office of War Information, will be appointed chief of the new Budget Bureau office in San Francisco . . . Lieutenant General Somervell can't answer the gossiping about him. He won't be back for another month . . . Larrence S. Apsey has been made chief of Justice's antitrust office in New York . . . Officials at Governor Lehman's old office of Foreign Relief and Rehabilitation aren't very enthusiastic about the merger with the new Office of Foreign Economic Administration. They suspect the Governor has been shelved and their work will be overhauled and much of it dropped . . . Herbert E. Stats, national secretary of the Society for the Advancement of Management, will resign his job with the Minnesota State government for a job with the Budget Bureau.

The actual cost of operating payroll sections in the Federal service isn't known but it's admitted that it runs into the tens of thousands of dollars and thousands of employes to get out the twice-monthly pay checks for the more than 3,100,000 workers. At the Office of Civilian Defense—an agency with 700 employes—seven employes were in the payroll section, or 1 pe rcent of the total. W. D. Denit, chief of the section, decided to do something about it. And he did. He cut his staff to four people and eventually it'll be cut to two.

Instead of having separate accounts for retirement, war bonds, employe earning card, and taxes, all four are consolidated on a single sheet—designed by Denit—and the payroll is written and the record of deductions is made in a single process on an accounting machine. The saving to OCD, of course, is a minor item, but the OCD method is spreading. The Justice Department has installed the machines and Denit's way of doing business and it's reported that around 25 employes will be available eventually for other duties. The War Department is studying the system and if it were adopted throughout the Federal service it would save money and manpower. Both the General Accounting Office and the Budget Bureau are interested in the system. GAO has given it its okay and Budget may compel other agencies to accept it.

The President is expected to ask Congress this week to give Federal agencies the authority to provide sick and health programs for their employes. It will be proposed that the programs be administered by the Public Health Service . . . Public Health, incidentally, has worked out a health program for merchant seamen under the jurisdiction of the War Shipping Administration. Medical Director Justin K. Fuller has been detailed from PHS to War Shipping to work out the program. His deputies will be M. V. Ziegler, C. E. Rice, W. G. Terwilliger and Daniel Blain. A health program for Federal workers is long overdue . . . The need of day care for children of Federal workers is being determined by a Children's Bureau questionnaire that's being circulated among working mothers.

The War Production Board decentralization will be much more sweeping than is generally believed. Several thousand—not hundred—jobs will be moved to the field before January 1. . . . Office of Price Administration also is decreasing its Washington staff. It's about 4200 now and it'll slump to around 3500 before officials make any attempt to stabilize it. . . . War Bond news: Julia Mantinband, a Bureau of Labor Statistics clerk, has purchased a $1500 bond to boost the Labor Department total. . . . A junior clerk at the Office of Censorship, Mrs. Sara Oberg, put her savings of $4400 in war bonds. . . . Government employes have a quota of 156 millions. Your dollars are needed to help them over the top. . . . Plenty of seats are available in private autos that bring employes to and from the Pentagon daily. In all, 3258 cars are used by War employes and they average 2.3 passengers.

Maritime Commission needs employes, particularly stenographers, typists and junior clerks. Commission employes are being asked if they know someone—or some who may know someone—who might be interested in a Maritime job. Representatives of the Civil Service Commission and Maritime are literally ringing doorbells in an effort to meet the demands.

At Gallinger Hospital Hearing

of the packages.

"I saw a box marked 'fryers' and another carton marked 'corn flakes.'"

"Can you positively identify the sacks of sugar?" Bocock demanded.

"Yes, I saw a boy from the kitchen putting them in your car," replied Orr.

Tucker also said he was ordered by Arthur E. Files, laundry foreman, to take gasoline, a roll of copper screen wire, a heavy aluminum frying pan, sacks of cement, a big piece of canvas and nickel-plated copper from the hospital storerooms on various occasions. He stated that he placed most of the goods in Files' automobile.

"Files took dozens of tea towels, pillow cases, sheets and spreads or whatever he needed," Tucker asserted. "I tried to keep the OB (obstetrics) ward supplied with plenty of diapers but I had to steal them out of there to give to the nurses. I don't know what he did with them, but he wouldn't turn them loose for the OB ward."

"Why did you leave?" he was asked by Senator Bushfield.

"I saw that it wouldn't mean anything but going back to Lorton (Reformatory) for me, so I quit. He (Files) started raising the devil with me when I didn't get him the gasoline he wanted, so I got mad and got my check and left," Tucker said.

Tucker returned to the hospital to "collect a debt" after he severed connections there, he said, and at that time Files told him that "if he heard any more that I said I had been stealing for him, he'd have me locked up because I was an ex-convict—but I told him I could prove everything I said."

Files, called to testify immediately after Tucker, told Senator Bushfield that whatever he took, he paid for. Various fixtures which he had taken for his 40-foot boat, he said, were returned to the hospital.

"You did take gasoline?" Bushfield inquired.

"Yes, absolutely."

"What became of the copper wire and the skillets?"

Battle Winston, 1533 B st. se., Negro orderly employed at Gallinger since 1940, said he borrowed $15 from Thomas McPeak (identified as "the loan shark" in a report made by the Assistant Comptroller General of the United States to the District Commissioners, upon which many of Bushfield's questions were based) and signed a slip saying that he must repay $18.75.

"When I failed to pay the extra $3.75, I got a letter from Dr. Bocock saying that if I owed Mr. McPeak any money, to pay it. I didn't pay the $3.75."

"How long did you have the $15?" asked Senator Buck (Republican) of Delaware, who presided.

"A month," Winston answered.

"Pretty fair rate of interest, eh?" said Buck.

"Another time I borrowed $5 for a week and paid back $6.25," Winston added.

"Then the name of 'loan shark' seems to apply, doesn't it?" said Buck. "That's not bad interest."

Robert A. Roane, 328 18th st. ne., who for 12 years was chief clerk at Gallinger, asserted that until about 1936, it was a practice at Gallinger to charge a $2 fee for signing insurance death claims.

"To whom were they paid?" Bushfield asked.

"To the superintendent, Dr. Bocock."

"Were they paid to the Federal Treasury?"

"So far as I know, they were not."

Roane declared that everything attributed to him in the Comptroller General's report was true, including charges that a fund of $300 granted to the hospital for emergency supplies was used by Dr. Bocock to buy food for his own household.

Bocock Cross-Examines

Dr. Bocock received permission at the end of Roane's testimony to cross-examine him, and asked:

"Why have you waited so long to bring matters to public attention?"

"I never volunteered the information until I was sought out," Roane said.

"Isn't it true that you are addicted to alcoholic beverages?"

"I don't know what it is."

"Then isn't it true that you got in trouble in Luray, Va., and Prince Georges County, and that you once spent the night in the Marlboro jail and were sentenced to six months of hard labor? And weren't you released to seek hospital treatment?"

Roane said that it was true.

Waldo A. Kuhn, 1955 S st se., supervisor of buildings and grounds, denied that employes of the hospital were used by him to construct storm windows and sashes for his home. He also denied that he had appropriated two passenger car tires from the hospital, as charged by the Comptroller General's report.

Charles C. West, chief pharmacist, likewise declared that charges of receiving payment to put a man on the hospital payroll, also cited in the report, were "absolutely incorrect."

L. C. Moss, 204 Mayer ave. ne., told the meeting that he had been a patient in the general ward at Gallinger for one week in April, 1942.

Very Unsanitary

"I had a room alone first and asked for a pillow. The nurse said they didn't have any more pillows. About 11 that night I felt a lot of itching and biting on my neck. I scratched and found that I had welts as big as my little finger. I called the nurse and told her that the room had lice, but she just got me four sleeping tablets. I refused to take them, wrapped up in a sheet and went out in the hall, because I wouldn't stay in that room. They took me to the general ward, and there weren't any lice there but the mattresses looked like they came from a coal house. I consider the hospital very insanitary."

McPeak, a carpenter foreman attached to Gallinger, admitted that he "loaned some of the boys some money."

"The Comptroller General's report says that one employe repaid you $125 on a $50 loan," said Bushfield.

"Whoever told you that lied," snapped McPeak.

Synthia Ward, 21-month-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter C. Ward, died at 8 o'clock last night in Garfield Hospital as the result of an accident which occurred two hours earlier when she fell from an automobile driven by her father in front of her home, 40 Chillum rd., Hyattsville, Md.

Ward, an engineer with the National Broadcasting Co., was en route to a neighborhood grocery when the child fell against the door, opening it, and fell into the street.

Her father picked up the child, placed her in the automobile and rushed to the hospital.

Inquest to Be Held

In the District, a coroner's jury this morning will investigate the death of William Tittensor, 80, an upholsterer of 4611 14th st. nw., the District's sixty-second traffic fatality this year.

Tittensor was struck Sunday night when crossing Florida ave. at Sherman ave. nw., and died at Casualty Hospital yesterday from a fractured skull.

Police reported that James W. Buckner, 38, 6200 31st st. nw., was driving the car which struck the man. He will appear at the inquest.

Mrs. Rose Weeks, 38, of 1516 Southern ave. ne., was taken to Casualty Hospital in serious condition yesterday suffering cerebral concussion, police said, after the Washington, Marlboro and Annapolis bus in which she was a passenger crashed into an electric power pole.

The bus, driven, police said, by Joseph Cordone, 37, of 1207 57th ave., Hillside, Md., was reported to have leaped from the road on Alabama ave. near Boulevard, se., while inbound to the District.

The side of the bus was stove in near where Mrs. Weeks was sitting, police reported. Other passengers were shaken severely but otherwise uninjured, it was said.

Streetcar, Truck Crash

A score of persons escaped injury yesterday when a streetcar crashed into and overturned a truck at 9th st. and Pennsylvania ave. se. The accident tied up westbound trolley traffic on the Avenue for 30 minutes.

The truck, a service van owned by the American Oil Co., was making a left turn from Pennsylvania ave. into 9th st. when it was struck by the westbound trolley.

John F. Nuth, 38, of Baltimore, Md., driving the truck, was not injured. The motorman was identified as Wilson W. Miller, 51, 3725 W st. nw. Both will appear at a hearing in the Corporation Counsel's office later this week.

300,000 Being X-rayed in Drive To Combat Tuberculosis

Some 300,000 Washington residents are in the process of being X-rayed in a vigorous drive of the United States Public Health Service to combat tuberculosis here, Edward K. Funkhouser, executive secretary of the District Tuberculosis Association, revealed yesterday.

FUNKHOUSER

In an interview with The Post, Funkhouser, who assumed his position September 15, stressed the importance of "mass X-raying" and pointed out that newly developed methods of taking X-ray pictures cheaply were of enormous help in the fight against tuberculosis "whose old, basic problem is still to find, then treat it and cure it."

Funkhouser, appointed as executive secretary in July after a spirited fight over the efficiency of the association following the resignation of Harald H. Lund from the same position last April, has drawn up a program for the group's work, he said, which "he hoped will find the approval of the board of directors."

Declining to disclose the points of his program before final approval by the directors, Funkhouser said that, in his opinion, the Tuberculosis Association's task is to "coordinate the efforts of all groups which are engaged in the fight against the disease, to help them and supplement where needed and desired."

The purpose of the association, he said, is health education and rehabilitation. "We are not a relief society," he stressed.

Commends Health Service

Commending the Public Health Service for its work in the mass X-raying drive, Funkhouser declared that the association will "cooperate with this effort in any way we can," by supplying educational material to convince the people of the necessity and value of the campaign.

Funkhouser cited experiences in other cities which have proven the value of automatic X-raying of all persons admitted t· hospitals as a means of finding hidden tuberculosis. He strongly urged adoption of the plan in Washington, which shows a higher death rate of the disease than any other city of similar size, except Baltimore.

Indorses Suggestion

As another means of checking tuberculosis, Funkhouser indorsed the suggestion made by Representative d'Alesandro (Democrat) of Maryland during congressional investigation of the situation last spring that all Civil Service employes coming to Washington be X-rayed here.

Funkhauser, who was born in Harrisonburg, Va., has more than 20 years' experience in the health field and was executive secretary of the Passaic County (N. J.) Tuberculosis and Health Association.

Paul S. Sleeper, president of the District Tuberculosis Association, said yesterday that "the excellent experience of Mr. Funkhouser promises fine results of his work here."

Tuberculosis Cases, Deaths Gain Here

During 1942 there were 2179 new adult cases of tuberculosis reported in the District resulting in 617 deaths. This was an increase in cases of 193 over the preceding year and an increase in deaths of 40, according to the annual report made yesterday by the Health Department.

It was stated that wartime conditions had placed responsibilities on the Bureau for Tuberculosis which had not been anticipated, such as: Following all cases diagnosed by Selective Service at Fort Myer, cases found in the mass survey carried on by the U. S. Public Health Service in cooperation with the Health Department and the responsibility for X-raying food handlers.

Shortage of Personnel

The report complained of the scarcity of personnel to carry on the added work, stating that many of its trained physicians had gone into the armed forces and that the clerical staff had been reduced far below the minimum requirements. Because of this, its was said, many cases had to be dropped to meet conditions arising out of an untrained staff.

Of the total number of cases reported 28 per cent were found by the bureau. This figure does not include child cases. A total of 39,907 clinical visits were made by 17,458 registered patients. This figure represents 1.1 per cent more visits than demanded by standards of the U. S. Public Health Service, it was said.

Largest Group

The report stated that in all classes the largest number of cases occurs among Negroes. This group comprised 54.5 per cent of the total of new patients and 45.5 per cent of the number of old patients visiting clinics.

During the year there were 17,458 admissions recorded in the clinics and in the same period 13,918 cases were discharged leaving a total of 3540 patients on the rolls at the year's end.

On the basis of the 1942 population of the District the death rate per 100,000 persons in the District was 72.8.

Office Managers Meet

Wayland S. Bowser, comptroller of the Blaw-Knox Co., Pittsburgh, Pa., will discuss "Clerical Surveys and Procedure Manuals" at a dinner meeting of the National Office Management Association at the Statler Hotel tomorrow at 7 p. m.

District Shows 15% Increase In Syphilis

In the annual report of the Health Department submitted to the District Commissioners yesterday it was indicated there was a 15 per cent increase of syphilis in the District during the calendar year 1942 over 1941.

The increase was credited to the large population growth plus the cases found in the Selective Service and military contact programs. The number of cases in the infectious stages increased 12 per cent.

It was pointed out because of war conditions the rate may be expected to increase unless it is possible to secure diagnostic, isolation and other treatment facilities not now available.

Isolation Needed

One of the greatest needs cited is an isolation ward containing 100 beds where women found to be infected may be placed until they can be rendered noninfectious. At the present time only clinic treatment is available. It was also pointed out there was no way in which women who were arrested on various charges and suspected of being venereal could be held until complete examinations could be made.

Also recommended were laws making the treatment of venereal diseases mandatory, additional isolation facilities for men, adequate reporting of cases by private treatment sources, additional clinical facilities and additional medical and clerical personnel to staff the necessary clinical facilities.

10,000 Selectee Contacts

In the Selective Service program it was stated there was evidence that of over 10,000 instances of venereal diseases among the selectees from November 1940 to December 31, 1942. Of this number only 4130 were found or placed under treatment.

During the year the bureau referred 124 men who had been rejected because of syphilis and 127 because of gonorrhea back to the local draft boards as being fit for military service.

In 1942 the bureau received 1352 reports from the armed forces of Washington girls who were named as sex contacts to military personnel. Of the 493 cases found 70 per cent were given clinical examination; 42 per cent of these, or 145, were found to be infected.

D. C. Death Rate Reaches New Low

plained by stating a large number had been added during the previous year.

The report especially complimented the dietary staff on the improvement in the quality and service of meals served the patients. It pointed out the presence of several additional dietitians had permitted the more effective inspection of the quality of meal service with the result that the number of complaints arising during the year were the lowest in history.

1200 Patients the Limit

Throughout the entire year the occupancy of beds was less than it had been during the preceding year, never exceeding 1200 patients. It stated the distribution of patients was comfortably spaced and there was no reason to believe there will be overcrowding under present conditions such as has prevailed in the past.

The report showed 11 per cent of all District births during the year occurred at Gallinger. Abortions made up about one-eighth of the cases admitted to the obstetrical division and it was also shown that infection was present in 92 of these or 26 per cent of all abortion cases admitted. The one death from abortions represented 50 per cent of the entire maternal death rate, the report indicated.

In the division of preventable diseases the low incident of malaria was attributed to the malaria control unit instituted during the year. All five cases of recorded malaria were said to have been contracted some place else.

One Typhus Rat Case

A large number of Gearman measles were reported and also an increase in meningitis. Only one case of typhus fever was reported and was traced to a rat-infested garbage pile. The condition was said to have been corrected. There were 11 cases of food poisoning reported during the year, one case resulting in 300 persons becoming ill. The foods involved were ice cream, ham and mixed foods.

During the year over 15,000 children were immunized against diphtheria which represented a 16 per cent increase over last year. There were 67 cases of diphtheria reported which resulted in two deaths. Of 23 cases of typhoid rever two resulted in death. Two deaths were reported in 607 cases of scarlet fever and 16 deaths out of 965 cases of whooping cough. There were no cases of smallpox reported.

During the year there were 1533 persons bitten by dogs, 20 by cats and two by rats. There were no deaths from rabies.

City News in Brief

Police testified in Municipal Court yesterday that while the members of the chorus at the Gayety Theater were dancing on the stage last Tuesday two men were systematically looting their pocketbooks in the dressing room.

Held on the charge were T. J. Hendley, 25, Negro, of 2423 Champlain st. nw., and a 17-year-old youth. Hendley was held for grand jury action under $1000 bond on a housebreaking charge and the youth was remanded to Juvenile Court.

Taken from 12 pocketbooks were a ring, sums of money ranging from $1.45 to $5.75 and a few gasoline ration coupons.

Fund Division to Meet

Business-envelope sized "kits," containing lists of prospects to be called upon and instructions concerning Community War Fund's campaign, which opens next month, will be distributed to members of Advance Gifts Division of the Fund at their second weekly luncheon today at 12:30 p. m., in the "Hall of Flags," U. S. Chamber of Commerce. Box luncheons, again served by the Washington Council of Church Women, will feature the luncheon and Abbot P. Mills, Washington lawyer and chairman of the Advance Gifts Division, will preside.

Exemplification of the fifth degree will be held tonight at 8 o'clock at the Scottish Rite Temple, 2800 16th st. nw. Preceding the degree work, Mithras Lodge of Perfection will meet.

Army Show In Process of Dismantling

Display Declared Complete Success; Big Guns Go on Parade in New York

By Bert Kemmerer
Post Staff Writer

Industrial, labor and newspaper leaders of the Nation yesterday afternoon in a special tour of exhibits of the great Army show—"Back the Attack"—were conducted over the Washington Monument Grounds by Lieut. Col. Frank T. McCabe, officer in charge.

Immediately following the tour made in Army jeeps, an order became effective to dismantle the great show.

"All exhibits stand relieved from duty at this headquarters," it was officially announced. "They will then proceed to carry out such orders as they may have from the Army Air Forces, the Army Ground Forces and the Army Service Forces."

Col. McCabe congratulated the personnel of the exhibits "on a job well done" and thanked them for their cooperation.

Maj. Gen. Alexander D. Surles, director of the public relations bureau of the War Department, said "the entire 'Back the Attack' show was perfect."

Maj. Gen. E. Reybold, Chief of Engineers, and other high-ranking officers of the Army expressed high satisfaction with the immense production.

Thus, "Back the Attack," the immense Army spectacle sponsored by The Washington Post and presented at the request of the Treasury in connection with the Third War Loan Drive, officially ceases to exist.

Swiftly reorienting and to be used at noon today in a monstrous parade in New York City in connection with the Third War Loan, a convoy of Ordnance and Air Forces materiel captured in operations against the enemy by American troops, rolled out of the "Back the Attack" area last night to arrive at its destination early this morning.

The convoy is in charge of Lieut. James Carmody.

Seen by 1,750,000 Here

Materiel which will rumble along Gotham streets today and which for three weeks have been witnessed by more than 1,750,000 in the Capital of the Nation, includes:

German Mark 111, 21-ton tank.

German 2-ton motorcycle half-track.

German 1-ton half-track.

German volkswagen (jerry jeep).

Japanese 75-mm. antiaircraft gun.

Japanese Zero fighter.

German Messercshmitt.

The materiel was rushed to New York at the request of the Treasury Department's New York finance committee, according to Carlton Duffus of the Treasury public relations office.

An outstanding record set at the exposition in Washington was that no one of the 1600 men composing the personnel of the "Back the Attack" task force was injured throughout the 18-day period.

Every demonstration in the area, the ordnance "tank run," and the many exhibit areas were carried through without mishap, although many of the undertakings gone through daily were of an extremely hazardous nature.

Superior equipment and excellent training in using it, obviously was the answer.

"Back the Attack's" public relations office, under the direction of Maj. John H. Galloway, last night ceased to function. With John Gordon, civilian public relations director of the AAF, Lieut. H. Eldridge of the Ordnance Department, and Lieut. Don Craig of the quartermasters, hundreds of photographs and press releases for the many exhibits of the show have been sent out.

Sergt. Thomas Flynn and Corpl. A. Moser assisted in the office.

It was revealed that the popular WAC band from Datona Beach, Fla., which has played officially for the "Back the Attack" action show throughout its existence, will not go directly for its home station.

Under the direction of Sergt. Celia Merrill, the organization will leave Washington osme time today although its destination was unannounced.

The final job of the task force, still encamped at Hains Point, will be striking camp and policing the area both there and on the Washington Monument Grounds, before returning to their stations—or destinations.

Details are busy dismantling the various exhibits for shipment or truck convoy to their origin and already a vast calm has settled over the historic area where, during the past 18 days nearly two million visitors, most of them for the first time, saw the most graphic exhibition of its nature ever presented.

In connection with the Third War Loan Drive, the great show which literally swept the Capital of the Nation off its feet, has loaned past 18 days, nearly two million visthousands who witnessed it, heard the country's leaders tell of it and participate in the great, colorful pageantry which made "Back the Attack," the exhibit of the year.

Women's Club News

By Genevieve Reynolds

With a progressive attitude toward religion and its place in the world, the Washington Council of Church Women opens the annual three-day missionary institute this morning, 10:30 o'clock, with a visit to the Americanization School, 10th and H sts. nw.

Miss Maud E. Aiton, principal of the school, who is a leader of national fame, will give a brief talk, then the group will visit the various class rooms. Actually all of today's program will be an adventure into becoming an American. This year the main themes of the institute are: "The Church and America's People," "Christian Ventures in Learning and Living."

In keeping with the principal theme of the institute, a class based on Kenneth D. Miller's textbook, "We Who Are Americans," will be conducted by Mrs. Theodore O. Wedel from 10:40 to 11:20 tomorrow morning following registration, 9:30 a. m., and greeting, 10:30 o'clock, by Mrs. Irving Ketchum, chairman of the committee. All sessions tomorrow and Thursday will be held at Calvary Baptist Church, with Mrs. Joy Elmer Morgan council president and Mrs. Ketchum presiding alternately.

One of the highlights of the program today will be a meditation and worship hour with Mrs. Ruth Mougey Worrell, executive secretary of the United Council of Church Women, New York City, as leader. Mrs. Worrell, who came down especially to attend the institute, is widely known as author and producer of some of the largest religious pageants presented in this country. This meeting will be followed by a sacrifical luncheon at 12:30 p. m. Again at 6:30 p. m. will be a sacrificial supper for leaders, teachers of children, ministers and all other interested persons. Both are planned as continuation of the devotional services. No charge will be made, but an offering will be taken for the council's work at Gallinger Hospital.

A special night at 8 p. m. Wednesday will be featured by an address by Dr. Walter Van Kirk, head of the department of international justice and goodwill of the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America. He is the author of "Religion and the World Tomorrow" and broadcasts "Religion in the News" each Saturday night from New York.

Many instructors will assist with classes. Among them will be Mrs. Charlotte V. Wiser, coauthor of the text, "For All of Life;" Dr. Frederick E. Reissig, executive secretary, Federation of Churches; Mrs. C. A. Lindsay and Mrs. O'Neal Johnson.

Mrs. Roosevelt at Tea

Just back from Australia, Mrs. Roosevelt took time out of her busy schedule to attend the Woman's National Democratic Club's tea yesterday at the clubhouse.

It was fitting that the First Lady should be on hand for the observance of Democratic Day, for it was she who originated the occasion several years ago. The tea yesterday honored Postmaster General Frank Walker and Mrs. Walker, Mrs. Roosevelt, cabinet members and their wives, and women government executives.

Representative Mary Norton, speaker of the day, urged the women of the Democratic Party to accept the responsibility of leadership that goes with the majority power and challenged her listeners to solidify the party's control at the election.

Receiving with Mrs. Francis B. Sayre, the president, were: Postmaster General and Mrs. Walker; Secretary of Labor Perkins, Senator Hattie Carraway, Representative Mary Norton, Mrs. Francis Biddle, wife of the Attorney General; Mrs. Claude Wickard, wife of the Secretary of Agriculture; Mrs. J. Borden Harriman, former Minister to Norway; Mrs. Jesse Jones, wife of the Secretary of Commerce; Mrs. Lucille Foster McMillin, Civil Service Commissioner; Mrs. Nellie Tayloe Ross, Director of the Mint; Mr. and Mrs. Ambrose O'Connel.

Still others in the receiving line were: Oscar Ewing, Edwin W. Pauley, Mrs. George E. Allen, Charles Michelson, Mrs. Ellen S. Woodard, Dr. Louise Stanley, Mrs. Thomas Ford, president of the Congressional Club; Mrs. Emily Newell Blair.

Because of the need for more funds to battle tuberculosis, the Washington Intermediate Chapter of the Jewish Consumptives' Relief Society of Denver, Colo., will hold its fifth anniversary dance October 6, at 7:30 p. m. at the Willard Hotel. Tickets and information may be obtained by telephoning Esther Deckelbaum, Taylor 6058.

Friday, October 1, has been designated opening night for the Georgia State Society of Washington. A dance will be held 10 p. m. in the Shoreham ballroom. Thomas Camp, president of the society, will head the receiving line with Mrs. Camp, and the officers of the society who include Mrs. J. K. Stacy, Ernest Greesling, Miss Julia Reynolds, Mrs. J. W. Thurston, Mrs. Betty Power Mitchell, Mrs. Leone Bucholtz and C. H. Daniel.

Same student at the end of the seven weeks' training course

By Margaret George

You don't need a fairy godmother these days. Not when transformations like that illustrated in these two before and after pictures can be effected. Of course, it isn't accomplished with the wave of a wand. It'll take diligent application on your own part for a few weeks. But the results promise to be well worth it.

This new home beauty course, which has already been inaugurated in New York City, is going to be introduced this Thursday in one of our Washington stores. John Roberts Powers, a name that doesn't need any introduction, is responsible for this new, easy way to charm. It isn't expensive. You aren't required to buy any elaborate cosmestics. You don't have to spend hours in a salon.

You simply step into the salon of the store and order the lessons mailed to you. Some few of the lectures are given in the salon, but the most of them come to you in your home. It isn't supposed to make you a Powers model (it could). It's supposed to help you, the average woman or girl, discover and make the most of your own possibilities.

The first two weeks of the course are very sensibly given over to the basis of all beauty in women — health and regular grooming habits. Without these, the rest isn't worth a hoot.

Following this, work on your face and skin begins. After you register for the course, you submit a photograph of yourself as is. It's on the basis of this photograph that the Powers' expert works out what they call a "photo-revise." It's a piece of tissue paper that fits right over the face, and itemizes the things that you should do about hair and make-up.

Exercises designed to correct your special figure faults are included. Voice training and public speaking instructions, two very essential attributes to charm, go along with the course. They also tell you what kind of clothes your should wear, what colors, what kind of silhouette is most flatering, etc.

As a finishing touch, you receive a lecture from John Powers himself—a frank discussion of what men like and what they don't like, and an account of some of the special charm tricks of famous Powers models.

Sounds like a good program to you? It did to us, too. That's why we're talking about it here. If you want to know where it's going to be given, just call NAtional 4200, extension 324, between 9 a. m. and 5 p. m.

Nerves Cause Dyspepsia

By Logan Clendening, M.D.

Of all the nervous invalids, the nervous dyspeptics are the most nervous. This can be explained on the basis that the digestive tract is the most primitive structure in the anatomy. The lowest, simplest animals are all stomach. As we ascend in the scale, a nervous system grows up around his stomach. And a man still has a good deal of nervous system around his stomach, and the stomach and digestive system respond to emotions more readily than any other organic system in the body.

Thus emotions certainly stop appetite — anorexia. And they cause nausea. And the nervous system causes spasms in the stomach, or intestine, which pass for indigestion or dyspepsia.

Various influences in life—early home training and experiences—acquaintance with a parent or other relative who is always talking about bowels and stomach ulcers or palpitations of the heart, or feeling weak, or vitamins, will create a subconscious personality which concentrates on one or the other of the systems of the body—digestive, heart, nutrition.

All through life that person is conditioned in moments of stress to break down in whatever system his subconscious was attached to. And the subconscious is the largest part of our mental and emotional life—like an iceberg, only one-third is above the conscious sphere where it can be recognized.

In treatment these people should be treated by psychology, but they usually are not. They are great self-treaters and self-indicators—they switch from pills to powders to liquids to vitamins and back again. They should avoid diets and learn to eat everything—but they go for diets, borrow them from each other, separate their proteins from their carbohydrates and every other fool thing.

They should avoid operations, but they are suckers for them—infected teeth, tonsils, chronic appendix, gall bladder, etc.

Your Baby and Mine

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

The aim of this department is to help mothers who are having difficulties. I am sure this mother does not think she is, but there are possibilities of difficulty in her present program which I feel it necessary to point out.

"I have just finished reading about a 5-month-old baby and I want to tell you about our baby. His schedule is as follows:

"At 6 a. m. he has a bottle of milk. At 9 a. m. he has orange juice, cod liver oil nad a dish of cooked cereal. At 10 a. m. he has a bottle of milk. He sleeps then until 12, when I have to waken him to feed him a hard-cooked egg or a scraped apple, banana or pear. At 2 p. m. he has a bottle of milk, then another nap of two hours and I waken him at 4 p. m. for a half-can of vegetables, the same of fruit and half a cup of milk and at 7:30 goes to bed and sleeps until 6.

"He is so good you wonder you have a baby. He was only 6 pounds at birth and now weighs 21. We are very proud of him."

You have every right to be. But I cannot help worrying about the habit you are cultivating of waking the baby for food. Also your practice of feeding every two hours when all babies of this age are fed but once in four hours and many of them only three meals a day. He now weighs as much as a child of 1 year and gets more meals than even the new-born baby. Why?

Because you are forgetting that milk is a food and demands just as long for digestion as any of the solid foods.

Tomorrow I will write an article on the three-meal schedule which would be correct for your baby. Meanwhile, this is the way he ought to be fed and as I think you imagine you are feeding him:

9 a. m., orange juice and cod liver oil.

10 a. m., cereal and bottle of milk.

Then our baby would be able to take a full, undisturbed nap from about 10:30 until 1:30 and perhaps from 2:30 until 3:30 or later in the afternoon. You haven't made these mistakes deliberately and I hope you'll forgive me for pointing them out.

Our leaflet, "The Three-Meal Schedule," may be had by sending a 3-cent stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request to Myrtle Meyer Eldred in care of The Washington Post.

Why They Go Mad

(NEWS ITEM—An increasing number of women are becoming psychiatric patients.)

Here is why:

MRS. A—Was stricken with a siege of hysteria when, after shopping for weeks for a $5 handbag and finding all the ones she was the least interested in priced $22.50 and up; when after debating for days whether the $3.50 gloves she was splurging on would be more adaptable to her wardrobe this season (and next) if bought in beige or dark tan; when after developing calluses on both feet running down a moderately priced hat that would do something for her, and go with everything, she heard a fashion adviser tell how women could make wartime economies by "dressing up" last season's tired dresses and suits with numerous changes of colorful accessories, such as "stunning" handbags, gloves and hats—even one or two "good" pieces of costume jewelry.

MISS B—Suddenly lost her powers of coordination when during an unusually hectic week in the office she had to attend four showers for brides-to-be and expectant mothers; attend and buy presents for three weddings; go to hospitals to see six new infants; be present at goodbye luncheons for three girls who were tired of their Washington jobs and were going back home; and take to luncheon three newcomers with whom she had remote acquaintance in her home town and who were now in search of advice and rooms.

MRS. C—Developed a violent persecution complex when, after living through all the tax proposals and tax rumors of the last session of Congress and hearing her husband remark each time "Well we're just going to have to tighten up household expenses," and when, after having come from the grocery store where she had just exchanged the greater part of a $5 bill for a small roast, some butter and eggs, and a few peaches, she heard him read of the proposed new 30 per cent withholding tax and remark, "Well if that goes through we're certainly going to have to make some short cuts in the kitchen!"

MRS. D—Became obsessed with the delusion she was Einstein when after figuring her ration stamps for a family of six over a period of months, and becoming a lightning calculator at the butcher counter whenever she suddenly found her best laid calculations upset by the state of the display case, when after juggling her shrinking kitchen allowance to buy out of it for herself and the children a few things she didn't want him to know about; when, after all this, she attempted to help her husband make out his 1943 income tax estimate and found him shouting her down even when he was wrong.

MISS E—Developed a dangerous case of claustrophobia after having (a) ridden for months on buses and street cars between 8 and 9 a. m. and 5 and 6 p. m. (b) tried to do her fall shopping on Thursday nights (c) attended a movie based on love in the jungle (d) made the rounds of the costume jewelry counters in search of some unusual earrings (e) rode in a day coach (f) got caught in a jam where a nylon stocking sale was erroneously reported taking place (g) shopped in a grocery the day a new supply of washing powder and electric light bulbs came in.

MRS. F—Became the victim of an anxiety neurosis after hearing her crafty friends boast of how they were stocked with wool suits, two-way stretch girdles, fancy shoes, real linens, nonshrinking panties, boxes of soap, yards of elastic and satin backed ribbon, bolts of maline, bobby pins, alarm clocks, atomizers, highboys, etc., and after she heard them ominously predict that "a lot of people" were likely to be going in rags and have perfectly bare houses berore this thing was over and—after she realized that she could go on what she had for only a year—or by careful planning, two years at most!

Martha Ellyn's Platter Chatter

Stuffed baked tomatoes are among the dishes that can be prepared from this vegetable which is now plentiful. The tomato cases can convoy many bits of food, either freshly cooked or leftover. The ones pictured here are stuffed with creamed tuna fish and garnished with grated cheese

Martha Ellyn

Tomatoes are plentiful, both ripe and green ones. These are worthy vegetables and should be used as long as the garden varieties are coming to us. The use of this vegetable is a great saver of blue ration points.

Now that our days are cooler, oven meals will be on our lists oftener. So if you are baking a meat loaf, some potatoes or other sturdy food, then leave space for making tomato crunch. Let's include it in a dinner menu.

Dinner Menu

Quaker Meat Loaf
Baked Potatoes Tomato Crunch
Wilted Cabbage
Enriched Bread Butter
Chocolate Pudding Beverage

The following recipe for tomato crunch will make 4 servings. If you anticipate what a big hit this dish will make you will probably double the recipe.

TOMATO CRUNCH

Skin 8 ripe tomatoes of medium size and cut in small pieces. Place half in a well-buttered dish; add 2 small onions, minced; sprinkle with salt, pepper and ¼ cup zwieback crumbs. Dot with 1 tablespoon butter or margarine. Add remainder of tomatoes and season with salt and pepper. Sprinkle top with 1 tablespoon sugar and ¼ cup zwieback crumbs. Dot with 1 tablespoon butter or margarine. Bake in hot oven (425 degrees F.) about 40 minutes. If canned tomatoes are used, reduce baking time to 20 minutes. Approximate yield: 4 portions.

Perhaps you will like making a tomato jellied salad while tomatoes are plentiful. You will find the following recipe makes an appealing one.

JELLIED TOMATO SALAD

Soften 1 tablespoon plain gelatin in ½ cup cold tomato juice. Add 1 cup hot tomato juice and stir until dissolved. Add 1 teaspoon sugar, ½ teaspoon salt, 2 tablespoons lemon juice and 1 teaspoon onion juice. Strain and pour into molds that have been rinsed in cold water and chill. Top each serving with a ball of cream cheese rolled in minced parsley. Place on crisp lettuce. Serve with equal parts of mayonnaise and boiled dressing, thoroughly mixed and chilled. Approximate yield: 4 portions.

PROCESSED FOODS—Canned and frozen vegetables, fruits, soups, juices, etc.—Blue coupons U, V and W valid through October 20.

GASOLINE — Coupons A-6 good for 3 gallons each, but must last through November 21. Coupons B and C, good for 2½ gallons each, expire according to date indicated in individual books.

FUEL OIL—Coupon 5 good for 10 gallons until September 30. Period 1 coupon in new ration sheets are also valid.

Market Report

The Oriental persimmon—that palatable fruit which you consumed with unabashed fervor under the name of Japanese persimmon in other years—is back on the market. Other supplies of fresh fruits and vegetables in the Washington wholesale mart remain approximately at last week's levels, according to the War Food Administration. Foods listed below were available to retailers up to noon yesterday.

Plentiful — Sweet potatoes, white potatoes, tomatoes, white and yellow squash, mushrooms, apples, limes, lemons and avocados.

Moderate — Cabbage, snap beans, beets, turnips, rutabaga, spinach, celery, sweet peppers, escarole, lettuce, carrots, corn, cantaloupes and honeydew melons.

Light — Oriental persimmons, lima beans, cauliflower, cucumbers, chicory, eggplant, radishes, onions, salsify, celery cabbage, leeks, kale, collards, turnip tops, rape, mustard greens, parsnips, garlic, parsley, acorn squash, oranges, pears, plums, prunes, grapes, Persian melons, Cranshaw melons and casabas

Your Figure, Madame!

By Ida Jean Kain

Anyone who tries to tell you that exercise is going to take off pounds is talking through her hat. In half an hour of severe exercise, you burn around 200 calories. That sounds slimming. But if you hie yourself out to the ice box for a snack of bread and butter you are right back where you started.

The way to lose pounds is to cut down on calories. You can leave them out of your menus a lot faster than you can burn them up. If you want to make a big cut in calories, delete the fats and the rich desserts. By doing that you can eat almost anything else you want and still lose weight.

According to the nutrition yardstick, the average moderately active woman uses 2500 calories a day. That allowance may be too liberal. You may not, normally, use over 2200 calories a day. In order to convert some of your excess fat into fuel, you have to take fewer calories than you use daily.

Just by cutting down 500 calories per day, you can average losing three-fourths of a pound per week. Leave off one slice of bread, one pat of butter, one tablespoonful of mayonnaise and that piece of pie—all of which we'll say you usually eat—and right there you have deleted 520 calories.

Of course, you may be in a hurry to reduce and ready to cut your calories to bring your daily intake down to 1200 or thereabouts. On that number, you can lose a good one and one-half pounds per week, maybe two. But when you drop down that low, your first concern must be to include all the protective foods. Remember, whether or not you are reducing, you need exactly the same amounts of the essentials as you do normally. On that few calories it's not what you leave out of your menu but what you put into it that counts. Your menus must be scientifically balanced to give you everything you need for health—an egg a day, two glasses of skim milk, a green leafy or a yellow vegetable, three slices of whole grain or enriched bread, three thin pats of butter or enriched margarine, two fruits, and a serving of meat, fish or fowl. That is a diet—but it may be better than you usually fare, and the entire list can be included within the 1200 calories that let you draw on your excess fat.

New Bridegroom Jealously Tells Former Divorcee He Refuses to Share Her Love With Her Son, 10; Says She Must Choose Between Them; What to Do?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I have been married for two months to a man I am desperately in love with; and at first we were very, very happy. I had been previously married, and have a son 10 years of age, by that marriage. When my new husband and I had been married about a month, we sent for the boy, who was staying with my people; and it was entirely agreeable to my husband to have him come. But now he tells me he is jealous of the boy and cannot bear to share my love with anyone else; and wants me to send the boy back to my people.

I know how they would feel about such an arrangement. They think a child's place is with his mother, if she is able to take care of him. And even though they would take him back, as they love him very much, they would always feel I hadn't treated him right; and the boy might grow up to feel the same way. I love both of them so terribly,—my husband and my son;—but in entirely different ways, as I am sure you will understand. Yet now my husband says I must choose between them; and I don't see how I can give either of them up. For the present, I am putting the boy in a private family, where he will board and go to school; and I feel this will help matters some, don't you? Do you think I sent for him too soon after we were married? Am I to blame? Or is my husband to blame? What is wrong? I am so worried I hardly know what to do, half the time.

Also, since we married, my husband has taken $20 from my check each payday, and an equal amount from his, and spent it for something,—I knew not what. But the other night he came home with eight war bonds, bought since we married,—and he says HE bought them. My name does not even appear on the bonds. Do you think he deserves all the credit for buying them,—when I had been doing without things all along to help his mysterious investment? Of course, I am happy about the bonds; but I do think I should have had some credit, don't you? And here is a third question: Do you think a couple ever gets to the point where they need a temporary vacation from each other,—say, for a week or two,—after only a few months' marriage? Do you think they would be happier together after a week or two apart? Please give your candid opinion on all three problems.

O. G. V.

Bride's Real Tragedy Is Ignoble Infatuation

DEAR O. G. V.: The real tragedy of your dilemma is your abject emotional enslavement to a cruel, selfish, "unnatural" man,—who, by the very meanness of his harsh ultimatum regarding your son, demonstrates (a) that he is unfit for intimate association with either of you; and (b) that any sacrifice made to appease his monstrous vanity would be a worse-than-wasted sacrifice. To yield to his insistence to put the boy aside, in deference to his psychotic jealousy, even to the extent of placing the lad in a boarding home, is (1) to do creeping violence to your conscience and sound parental instincts, an outrage of sensibilities which will make for encroaching of sickness of nerves and spirit on your part; and (2) also to sow the seeds of haunting anxiety and embittered insecurity in your son's personality, seeds which tend to bear fruit in delinquent behavior in the "rejected child's" later years,—without (3) working the least fundamental improvement in your incurably bad relationship with this man, whose arrogant and blindly neurotic "taking over" of your life (since making you his wife) is damaging the mainspring of your character and rapidly reducing you to a critical state of mental confusion.

So, as for "What is wrong?"—Your husband is wrong, by every definition of the word which Webster supplies. His stand in this matter is "a violation of the legal rights of another;"—indeed, of two others. It is "a departure from duty and moral rectitude." It embodies "disrespectful, dishonorable treatment—," of both you and your son. It seeks to "defraud, to unjustly deprive" a mother and child of loving companionship, absolutely essential to the good of each. And if you have wisdom and character worthy of motherhood, and sufficient to strengthen your hand in rightly solving this horrid problem, you will never surrender to his wicked dictate to renounce your son.

Desire for Vacation Has Serious Significance

In the matter of war bond purchases, again your husband has committed a complicated wrong. In essence, he has stolen from you,—filching from your earnings to fatten his own purse. His thievish intent is revealed by the fact that he took the precaution to list the bond purchase only in HIS name. Certainly you should have had negotiable credit for your contribution to the purchase. By which I mean to say, your wistful dismay at being denied the spiritual bouquet of a congratulatory slap on the back from him for helping acquire "our" bonds, is rather beside the real cause for complaint, namely: his downright dishonesty in handling your funds. Which is, of course, all-of-a-piece with his moral swindler attitude toward your son.

Now, for the third question: Psychiatrists are agreed that there is serious trouble at the root of a marriage relationship, when man and/or wife feel a need to get away from each other for "a separate vacation." In a good marriage, nourished by wholesome love, a bond of positive and happy inter-dependence exists. The two feel best in each other's company, under any and all conditions. So, it is my candid opinion (1) that a vacation from your husband would not help matters in the least; and (2) that the fact that you are thinking in terms of a recess, so soon after the honeymoon, proves that the relationship is "no-good" at the core; and that, in your secret heart, you know it.

M. .H

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Norwegian girls of 17 years of age are being conscripted by the Nazis to build fortifications in anticipation of an Allied invasion, the United Nations Information Office reports. And a group of French girls, conscripted for land work in France several months ago in France, has arrived in Oslo, where they are being put to work by the Germans.

Dutch girl students who refuse to sign a declaration of loyalty to the German occupation authorities are being compelled to become conductors on streetcars, postal sorters and assistant nurses.

Facial Tissues Assured

Women will continue to get their facial tissues, and school children their writing tablets, due to an order by the War Production Board setting up maximum weights and sizes for many varieties of paper products. Using paper which is a little lighter or thinner than that formerly used will make the supply go further, as well as save much valuable shipping space.

Alexandria Home Waits for Gen. Spaatz

Wife of Famous Air Force Commander Back in House Purchased Two Years Ago

With three members of their family overseas, Mrs. Carl A. Spaatz, wife of Lieutenant General Spaatz, and two of her daughters have moved back to their historic home in Alexandria at 206 Duke st. They have been living in Washington during the last year.

General Spaatz, Allied commander of the Northwest Africa Air Force, has been overseas since May of 1942. Serving with him as a fighter pilot in the same theater of war is his son-in-law, Lieut. Emmett Burdell Gresham.

Mrs. Gresham, the former Miss Rebecca Wayne Spaatz, and the young officer were married last winter. She and her younger sister, Miss Carla Wallace Spaatz, are with their mother in Alexandria, and a third sister, Miss Katherine Harrison Spaatz, is in London as a member of the American Red Cross staff.

House More Than 150 Years Old

General and Mrs. Spaatz bought their red brick house in Alexandria in 1941. Believed to have been built more than a century and a half ago, it is next to the home of Dr. James Craik, physician who attended Gen. George Washington, and is in the old section of the seaport town within view of the Potomac.

The Spaatzes moved in just a week before the attack on Pearl Harbor—their idea had been that the house in Alexandria would be their home when the general was retired from service. Far from being ready to leave active duty, the 52-year-old air officer who was then a brigadier general and chief of staff under Gen. Henry H. Arnold, Army Air Forces commander, was given an even more important assignment.

This fall Mrs. Spaatz with Mrs. Gresham and Carla decided to move back to Alexandria, which they expect to be the family's residence for the duration as well as after the war They completed the move from Washington on Monday, September 20, just four days after General Spaatz was awarded another service decoration.

On September 16 at the advanced command post of the Allied Headquarters in North Africa, he received the Legion of Merit Medal from Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower at the same time another famous officer under his command, Maj. Gen. James H. Doolittle, was awarded the Distinguished Service Medal.

The Legion of Merit is not the first decoration to be won by General Spaatz for air achievements, as he holds both the Distinguished Service Cross and Distinguished Flying Cross. A graduate of the United States Military Academy at West Point, in 1914, he is a classmate of Lieut. Gen. Brehon Burke Somervell, commander of the Army Service Forces.

Awarded Decoration In World War I

During the World War he brought down two enemy planes in the St. Mihiel offensive and was awarded the Distinguished Service Cross as a flying ace when military aviation was in its earliest stages. In 1919 he had command of the national Flying Circus over the United States in connection with the Victory Loan drive.

In succeeding years, his various assignments with pursuit and bombardment groups including a tour of duty as commanding officer of Rockwell Field, Calif. were highlighted by his refueling flight in Los Angeles in 1929, when he was awarded the Distinguished Flying Cross for establishing a world record.

In Alexandria his family is becoming part of the life of the community with Carla enrolled in the seventh grade at St. Agnes School in Braddock Heights and Mrs. Spaatz actively interested in the city's various war causes.

When the Alexandria premiere of "This Is the Army" was held for Army Emergency Relief, Mrs. Spaatz led the way in supporting the benefit by purchasing the first ticket for the reserved seat performance from the chairman of the sponsoring committee, O. Ashby Reardon.

The sale was made two weeks ahead of time in the presence of Mayor William Thomas Wilkins and Robert G. Whitton, president of the Alexandria Chamber of Commerce, and the result was that even though the general ticket distribution was not scheduled until a week before the premiere, the public demand at the Reed Theater box office was so great that the committee had to begin sales immediately.

Patroness for Army Benefit

Mrs. Spaatz with Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, Representative and Mrs. Howard Worth Smith, sr., of Virginia and leading Alexandria residents was one of the patronesses for the benefit, and gave a radio broadcast for Army Relief the Sunday before "This Is the Army" opened in Alexandria.

She then sent her check to Mr. Reardon for 10 reserved seat tickets to be distributed to men in the armed forces at the United Service Organizations Club at 1605 Cameron Street. Those 10 men wherever they are, may be learning for the first time that they were the guests of a lieutenant general's wife.

As an added note on the benefit showing, the performance in Alexandria of "This Is the Army" topped its quota by $250.

In Atlantic City

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Sherby, who spent the summer at their farm near Beallsville, Md., are in Atlantic City, N. J., for a stay of several weeks.

New Canadian Attache and Wife

Succeeding Lieut. Col. W. Basil Wedd as military attache is Lieut. Col. Guy V. Gurney, shown above with Mrs. Gurney. Since 1942 he has been assistant adjutant general in the directorate of organization at National Defense Headquarters. Prior to that he served as staff officer of the Atlantic Command Headquarters in Halifax. Colonel Wedd has been assigned to duty overseas

3 Betrothals Are Made Known Today

The engagements of three Washington girls are made known today.

Maj. and Mrs. John H. Starr of Arlington announce the betrothal of their daughter, Mary Alice, to Sanford L. Van Ost, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Van Ost of Hackensack, N. J. Major Starr is associate professor of physical education at Colgate University and at present on leave of absence, stationed here with the U. S. Army

The prospective bridegroom is now serving in the Army Air Corps at Maxwell Field, Ala., after completing four terms at Colgate. No date has been set for the wedding.

Featherstone—Matthias

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Holt Featherstone announce the engagement of their daughter, Martha Janet, to Lieut. Donald William Matthias U. S. Army, adopted son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank E. Moore, jr.

Lieut. Matthias enlisted in the Army in November, 1942, and had his basic training at Fort Eustis, Va., later entering Officers' Candidate School at Camp Davis, N. C. He is now stationed at Camp Stuart, Ga., where the wedding will take place in October.

Reid—Atwood

Joseph A. Reid of Charlotte, N. C., announces the engagement and approaching marriage of his sister, Carrie Mae, to Leon Warner Atwood. The wedding will take place at the Sixth Presbyterian Church on October 23.

Mr. Atwood is the son of Mrs. W. Carl Atwood of Fort Jackson, N. Y. Both he and Miss Reid are residents of Washington.

Officials of Army Show Entertained at Willard

It was a group of officers who knew their work had been "well done" that gathered yesterday afternoon in the Willard for a reception given in their honor by Eugene Meyer, publisher of The Washington Post.

For these were the men who had been responsible for the great Army Show, "Back the Attack," which has been playing to thousands for the past 17 days on the Monument Grounds, under the sponsorship of The Washington Post.

Receiving their guests in the small ballroom of the Willard were Mr. Meyer and his daughter, Mrs. Philip Graham, who officiated as hostess in lieu of her mother.

Among the honor guests were Maj. Gen. Alexander Day Surles, Chief of the Army Press Relations; Lieut. Col. Frank R. McCabe, who was officer in charge of the show, and Mr. and Mrs. John A. Reilly. Mr. Reilly is the head of the local War Finance Committee of the Third War Loan Drive.

It was definitely a "Uniform party" with brass buttons and medals glistening everywhere one turned, and here and there all during the afternoon small groups would gather to talk over and rehash the events of the show's "tour" here.

Over 200 guests stopped in between the tea hours of 5 to 7 for a cup of cheer and a buffet supper. Noted among them were all ranks from sergeants to generals, and one of the hits of the afternoon was the WAC Master Sergt. Celia Merrill, whose job during the show had been the directing of the popular WAC band from Daytona Beach.

That the least shall be first for once, two other youngsters who had their full share of the attention were Lieut. Sherman Jubileer and Lieut. Thomas Valentine, whose prize-winning units had claimed their full share of attention on the Monument Grounds.

Circulating among the guests were Mrs. Alexander F. Jones, wife of the managing editor of The Washington Post, and Mrs. Frank Dennis, wife of the assistant managing editor.

Still others included Brig. Gen. H. A. Barnes, deputy quartermaster general; Gen. D. W. Chidlaw, Col. Francis V. FitzGerald, Col. Stanley J. Grogan, Maj. C. S. Comeaux, and many more.

Armed Forces In Alexandria To Be Honored

An armed forces reception for officers and their wives living in Alexandria will be held this evening, as old residents greet newcomers at the home of Dr. and Mrs. Robert South Barrett at 402 Duke st.

Dr. Barrett, nationally known Masonic leader, who last year served as grand master of the Masons in Virginia, has given over lower floor of his home for a Masonic Service Center to be used by all members of the Allied armed forces visiting the city.

The reception tonight at 8 o'clock is to be the first in a series of social events for officers' families and the Information Service is extending its invitation to members of all branches regardless of their length of stay in the city.

Welcoming the guests will be Mrs. Carl A. Spaatz, wife of Lieut. Gen. Spaatz, Allied commander of the Northwest Africa Air Force; Mrs. John Lesslie Hall, jr., wife of Rear Admiral Hall, task force commander in the invasion of Sicily; and Mrs. Charles Dodson Barrett, wife of Major General Barrett of the Marine Corps, who has had a command in the Southwest Pacific during the last year.

Also receiving will be Capt. Charles Dodson Barrett, jr., U SMC, battalion commander on the staff of the Marine Corps Reserve officers class at Quantico Marine base, who returned to Alexandria in August after three months in the Naval Hospital at San Diego, Calif.,

Mildred C. Ford Becomes Bride Of Mr. Bigelow

Mrs. Carl W. Core announces the marriage of her daughter, Mildred Caroline Ford, to Prescott Bigelow of Boston and Buenos Aires, Argentina, on Sunday, September 26. The ceremony was performed at 4:30 o'clock at the home of the bride's mother, with only members of the family and a few close friends attending. Miss Natalie Core was her sister's maid of honor.

The bride is a greatniece of the late Mrs. John Hays Hammond. Mr. Bigelow is a graduate of Harvard University and is assistant manager of Armour & Co. in Buenos Aires.

Lieut. Sterrett And Bride in Manhattan

Making their home at the Seymour Hotel in New York, are Lieut. William Dent Sterrett, jr., U. S. Army and his bride, the former Miss Marian Safford Fling.

Their marriage took place last week at the All Souls' Memorial Episcopal Church with the Rev. H. Hatch Sterrett, uncle of the bridegroom, officiating. The bride is the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Ridgway Fling of New York and Lieutenant Sterrett is the son of William Dent Sterrett and the late Ida G. Sterrett of this city.

Miss Betty Safford was the bride's only attendant. The bride is a graduate of Miami University and before her marriage was connected with Life, Time, Fortune, Inc. Lieutenant Sterrett received his degree from George Washington University and the National School of Law. He is stationed in New York with the Signal Corps.

Many Weddings Take Place As Peak of Bridal Season Nears

Miss Carolyn Elizabeth Nash Becomes Bride of Lieut. James B. Graham in Cullman, Ala.

Weddings continue to occupy the news as the peak of the autumn bridal season nears.

After a brief wedding trip through the Southern States, Lieut. James Burnside Graham, U. S. Army, and his bride, the former Miss Carolyn Elizabeth Nash, will make their home in Mount Rainier, Md.

Their marriage took place on Saturday at the First Methodist Church in Cullman, Ala. The Rev. O. K. Lamb performed the 6:30 ceremony. The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Baxter M. Nash of Cullman, Ala., and Lieutenant Graham is the son of Mr. and Mrs. James J. T. Graham of Bowie, Md.

The bride went unescorted to the altar. She was attired in a gown of ivory duchess satin, designed with leg-o-mutton sleeves, and sweetheart neckline. Her bouquet was of white orchids and lilies of the valley. Miss Martha Kate Nash was her sister's maid of honor. She was attired in a nile green moire taffeta and carried pink asters. Bridesmaids were Miss Marjorie Johnston, Miss Ruth Dodson, Miss Peggy Sue Bright and Miss Wanda Moyers. They wore camellia pink taffeta and carried white asters. Lieut. John C. Cole served as best man.

Following the ceremony a reception took place at the home of the bride's aunt, Mrs. Forney Fuller. The bride is a graduate of Alabama College, and Lieutenant Graham received his degree at Maryland University where he was a member of Sigma Nu fraternity. At present he is on duty in the Office of the Chief of Staff, War Department.

Murray—MacKenzie

Now on a wedding trip to New York and the New England States are Mr. and Mrs. Walter E. Murray. Upon their return they will make their home at the Everglade Apartments in this city.

The bride is the former Miss Hazel MacKenzie, daughter of Duncan MacKenzie, and Mrs. Lillian MacKenzie of Battle Creek, Mich. Mr. Murray is the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Walter Murray of Providence, R. I. They were married on Saturday in the Lincoln Chapel of the New York Presbyterian Church, Mich.

The bride was attired in a teal blue suit with black accessories and wore a corsage of white orchids. Her only atendant was her sister, Miss Violette MacKenzie, who was costumed in a brown suit and wore a corsage of yellow roses. Lieut. William H. Bell was the best man.

Hutchinson—Leatherwood

Currently on a brief wedding trip are Mr. and Mrs. Michael Hutchinson. She is the former Miss Edna Leatherwood, daughtor of the late Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Leatherwood of Fayetteville, Tenn.

The couple were married September 23 in the Western Presbyterian Church with the Rev. C. Stewart McKenzie officiating at the 8:30 service. The bride was attired in a gray crepe dress, worn with purple accessories and a corsage of purple orchids.

Mrs. Stevens Has New Post With Red Cross

Announcement is made of the appointment of Mrs. Leslie Clark Stevens to the post of Red Cross representative for Army and Navy women's activities for the Eastern area headquarters in Alexandria.

Mrs. Stevens, wife of Captain Stevens, U. S. Navy, former Naval Attache at the American Embassy in London, has spent most of her life in service circles. Her interest in Red Cross work dates back to World War I, when she served as a staff assistant with the District Chapter.

Faces and Places About Washington

BACK IN WASHINGTON after a 25,000-mile trip to Australia and New Zealand and a number of other points in the Pacific, Mrs. Roosevelt yesterday held her first White House press conference since her return.

The gathering also marked the First Lady's latest gesture toward equal rights—for men. Men reporters were admitted for the first time in the history of her conferences at the Executive Mansion. The distaff side of the press didn't mind that—we rather like having men about—but some of us were slightly shocked at the reasons Mrs. Roosevelt gave for the sudden lifting of the no-men-admitted rule. "I felt that this particular conference might not be exclusively of interest to the women of the country," she said, as if women reporters wrote only for women readers, and men had to be hauled in, if a male audience was to be reached. Well, anyway, a few men were there . . . conducting themselves in the meekest manner you can imagine, gallantly adopting a "ladies first" attitude and asking only a couple of questions during the entire conference.

HALF A HUNDRED reporters crowded into the Green Room of the White House to hear Mrs. Roosevelt describe her experiences. She told also how she happened to make the trip, and who paid the bill; and she observed, "The deepest impression I've come home with is a feeling of enormous pride in the younger generation and enormous faith in their ability to do what they set out to do, at whatever cost."

Reporters noted Mrs. Roosevelt's new streamlined figure; asked her if she had lost much weight on her long tour. She added she had. How much? "Quite a little," was the answer.

She pointed out that her trip was undertaken on three accounts: First, it was in response from New Zealand and Australia to visit their countries, following her journey to England. Secondly, Norman Davis, of the Red Cross, asked her to look over Red Cross activities in the Pacific theater and report to him. Thirdly, the President wanted her to visit as many hospitals and American men in uniform as possible.

"Who paid for the trip?" she was asked. She said she paid expenses to and from San Francisco, and after that, she had Government transportation ("just one seat in a transport plane"). I paid all my other expenses," she added.

She has already made an informal report to Mr. Davis and has included specific recommendations as to improvement of Red Cross work in the Pacific area. "But I will say this—the Red Cross already is doing a swell job, considering the equipment it has." She liked wearing the Red Cross uniform, she went on, "because that was an easy way to travel."

MOST SOCIALLY SOUGHT-AFTER man in Washington recently has been Laurence A. Steinhardt, United States Ambassador to Turkey, who is back in this country briefly for a series of conferences. He has shoals of friends here, and dinner invitations have been showered in his direction ever since he arrived at the Mayflower last week. Trouble is, time is short and conferences are long, and the envoy is home on business—not pleasure.

At a couple of parties the past week-end, however, he managed to drop in briefly; and each time, guests were soon gathered around, three-deep, asking all sorts of questions about Turkey in particular and the European situation in general. As wise as he is dynamic and well-informed, Mr. Steinhardt weighed his words carefully before he answered, and then talked only off-the-record.

Mrs. Steinhardt and their 15-year-old daughter, Dulcie Ann, are still in Ankara, where he will rejoin them within a few weeks. Incidentally, Mrs. Steinhardt has learned how to talk to the Turks in their own tongue in the year and a half she has been there. Firmly convinced that the best way to understand a foreign country is to learn its language, she now speaks seven. She learned French, German and Italian when she attended school in Europe. Swedish, she mastered when her husband was our Minister at Stockholm. She learned Spanish when he was envoy to Peru; Russian, when he was Ambassador at Moscow. The latest to her list of languages was added after he was appointed envoy to Turkey. Dulcie Ann is almost as accomplished a linguist as her mother. And the Ambassador himself, although he doesn't brag about it, can converse in eight languages.

MY SPECIAL BOSTON spy reports that press scribes in his section have made a fieyday of the recent visit of the Duke and Duchess of Windsor. They arrived there recently to be with Mrs. D. Buchanan Merryman, but they had no sooner hit town than they ran afoul of the press. Seems the Duchess observed in the hearing of reporters that she wasn't interested in clothes any more and that news found its way into print, along with the notation that the Windsors had 32 pieces of baggage with them.

After that, the fur began to fly. The former Wallis Warfield, who hitherto maintained remarkable poise in her dealings with the press, let fly with some spirited words. She complained of "unfair treatment" in the newspapers, and pointed out that no newspaper made a point of playing up their amount of luggage brought over by the Churchills . . . or King George and Queen Elizabeth. Well, maybe she has something there.

The Duke and Duchess are expected to arrive in Washington either today or tomorrow for a brief visit.

Net Earnings Of D. C. Banks Rise Slightly

By S. Oliver Goodman

Combined net profits of 22 Washington banks before interest and dividends totaled $1,403,000 in the first six months this year, according to a compilation released yesterday by the office of the Comptroller of Currency. This compared with $1,169,000 in the corresponding period last year.

Combined net earnings from current operations were $1,808,000 in the six-month period, against $1,286,000 last year. This was after provision for salary and wages, interest on time deposits, taxes and other current operating expenses, but not including depreciation, profits on securities sold and redeemed, etc.

The largest earnings source in the first six months was from interest on securities, which totaled $2,756,000 against $1,936,000 in the like 1942 period. Income from interest and discount on loans showed a sharp decrease, aggregating $2,477,000 in the latest period against $3,020,000 last year.

Increased service charges brought in $735,000 in the six months, against $646,000 last year.

Taxes, including income taxes, were $855,000, against $863,000 in the previous year.

The report was based on the semiannual statements of all 22 local banks.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, Sept. 27 (AP).—Oats came to the front toward the close in grain trading today, the December contract advancing almost a cent to a new seasonal high. The late strength in oats did not have much influence on wheat and rye, which finished only slightly changed from last Saturday.

Traders said there appeared to be considerable buying of December and selling of May oats, although the latter contract also was higher. Elevator interests, trade-ers asserted, were switching their hedges from the December to deferred deliveries.

At the close oats were ¾ to ⅞ higher, December 76⅞@76¾. Wheat was unchanged to ⅛ lower, December 1.48⅝@1.49, and rye was lower to ⅛ higher, December 1.07⅛@1.07¾.

Man Indicted For Gas Book Violation

The District grand jury indicted a former postoffice messenger yesterday on a charge of violating OPA regulations in obtaining his gas ration book. This is the first indictment of the kind here.

The defendant is Oscar J. Dunmore, Negro, 21, of 2202 14th st. nw. A messenger until May 6, he had legally obtained three "C" books. Then he applied for another "C" book in July, putting on his application that he was still employed by the postoffice. The indictment relates. He was charged with failing to notify his ration board of a significant change in his status and then falsifying information on his application.

Total of 49 Indictents

A total of 49 indictments, prepared by Assistant U. S. Attorney Sylvan Schwartz, was returned before Justice David Pine in District Court.

Eight persons were charged with violations of the Harrison Narcotic Act.

They are:

Lamar E. Brown, 39, of 228 I st. sw., and Edward Snowden 20, of 406 Fifth st. nw., both Negroes, who were charged with the sale of 2 grains of cocaine.

Harry E. Thomas, 37, of 523 6th st. nw., was charged with the sale of 6 grains of pantopon, a derivative of opium.

William J. Stewart, 42, of 904 N st. nw., charged with sale of 91 grains of heroin.

Abortion Case Convictions Are Upheld

The District of Columbia abortion statute is a "compromise between morals and hygiene far in advance of the law in most jurisdictions," Justice Thurman Arnold of the United States Court of Appeals stated yesterday as the court upheld the conviction of two women on a charge of performing an illegal operation.

The Appellate Court held that the statute does not put the burden on the prosecution to prove as a part of its case that the operation was not necessary for life or health.

Sentenced in January

The defendants were Miss Mary B. Williams, of 705 Fourth st. nw., and Mrs. Josephine M. Storm, 2430 Minnesita ave. se. They were sentenced last January 30 to serve from 1 to 3 years each after a District Court conviction. Two other indictments are still pending against Miss Williams.

The D. C. abortion statute allows abortions when necessary to the woman's health, but in most States the operation is permitted only to save the life of a patient.

Added Dangers

"The dangers of abortion apart from the moral aspects of the problem comes from the fact that those who seek the operation are compelled to resort to incompetent, unscrupulous practitioners, operating in secrecy, without antiseptic conditions and without possibility of careful treatment in case complications arise. Because of the pressure on the victim to avoid social disgrace the law is difficult to enforce," Justice Arnold states.

"It has been estimated that the annual number of abortions in the United States is between 800,000 and 3,000,000. Figures have been collected indicating that there is 11 death for each 87 abortions. There is no doubt that this alarming death rate is due to secret operations by unskilled criminal abortionists."

Many More Apple Pickers Are Needed

Although twice as many Washingtonians volunteered for apple picking in nearby ochards last week as ever before, "lots more are needed," John W. Jones, USES farm recruiting officer, said yesterday.

Jones contributed the increase largely to an influx of Government workers who took advantage of leave granted anyone desiring it for this reason. He said more than 200 persons had been sent out last week.

Today, more than a dozen players from the Washington Senators will "pitch in" and pick apples in nearby Virginia. Jones also said that a high-ranking Dutch officer and his wife had volunteered their services but would not disclose their name.

In the meantime, Fred Z. Hetzel, area monpower director, announced that plumbers have been taken off the list of critical occupations. Electrical motor and equipment repairmen, on the other hand, have been added to the list due to demands of the industry here which has developed into a bottleneck for various other trades.

J. R. Mohler, Sr., Jackson's Camp Commander, Dies

J. Rupert Mohler, sr., 97, commander of Stonewall Jackson's camp during the Civil War, died yesterday at his home, Woodlawn, Grottoes, Va.

A Virginia farmer since that war, Mr. Mohler at one time was part owner and operator, with his father and brothers, of the Grand Caverns in Virginia, known at the time as Weyer's Cave. The collection of specimens they gathered from the caverns was presented to the Museum of Fine Arts in New York City.

Surviving the veteran, who entered the Confederate Army at 15, are four sons, J. William, J. Rupert jr., F. Kemper, and John Addison, all of Washington, and two daughters now living in Grottoes and Harriston, Va.

His wife, Gertrude Hester, of Washington, died in January, 1940. His funeral will be held at his home in Grottoes.

Alfred T. Norris Rites Scheduled For Tomorrow

Funeral services for Alfred Taylor Norris, 60, of 6704 F st., Seat Pleasant, Md., will be held at 11 a. m. tomorrow at Chambers funeral home, 517 11th st. se. Burial will be in Cedar Hill Cemetery.

Mr. Norris died Sunday in Sibley Hospital after three weeks' illness.

A native of Unicoi, Tenn., Mr. Norris had been employed at the Navy Yard since the beginning of the war. He formerly had been attached to the Agriculture Department.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Mollie Norris; two sons, Thomas Leroy and James B. Norris; three daughters, Mrs. Robert Rouse, Mrs. George Johnson and June Norris, and a brother, Frank Norris of Erwin, Tenn.

D. C. Business Area Dimout Is Pledged

A dimout for Washington's business area, as requested by the Office of War Utilities two weeks ago, was pledged yesterday by the Board of Trade, while members of many downtown concerns promised cooperation in a voluntary plan to conserve electricity.

Evidence of scant adherence to the project in brightly lit store windows and glowing signs led the board to summon leading business representatives to a meeting at the Mayflower Hotel with an appeal for their participation.

"The Potomac Electric Power Co. is wholeheartedly behind this project," President A. G. Neal told local businessmen.

A proclamation by the Commissioners citing Washington observance in the Nation-wide program was promised by Charles W. Kutz, Engineer Commissioner.

Tom Walker, president of the Council of Electric Operating Companies, outlined the Government's requests for decreased illumination, designed to release more coal, manpower, transportation facilities and materials for war needs.

Although he stressed the need for electricity conservation, he stated, however, that "there is no need for Washington to worry about the supply of electric power for the duration of the war."

The Government-proposed dimout, which became effective on September 15, calls for elimination of all unnecessary lighting effects during daytime hours, with dimout after 10 p. m.

$350,000 Fire Damage

Tax Refunds In Insurance Suggested

President Roosevelt has suggested that tax planners consider making postwar tax refunds to individuals in the form of paid-up Government insurance, informed Capitol sources said yesterday.

The suggestion was made at a recent White House tax conference in connection with proposals for compulsory savings or "refundable taxes." Discussion was said to have turned on the question of how the "savings" or "refundable taxes" would be paid back.

In place of making repayment in cash, President was said to have proposed making the refunds in varying amounts of Government insurance.

Whether the proposal has been reduced to a complete plan for eventual presentation to Congress in connection with the next tax bill was not known.

Universal Service Act Seen in Event Labor Plan Fails

Boston, Sept. 27 (AP).—A universal service act was foreseen today as "the next logical move" by Chairman Emory S. Land of the United States Maritime Commission, in the event of failure of the newly promulgated war manpower plan designed to remedy critical labor shortages on the West Coast.

Addressing an American Federation of Labor metal trades department convention, Rear Admiral Land urged support "by all hands," of the plan for allocation of labor according to urgency in West Coast production areas, announced by War Mobilization Director James F. Byrnes.

Land declared that although American shipbuilders had put 2100 merchant ships into war service in two years, "we have a tougher job ahead. We have to produce 2500 merchant ships between now and the end of 1944." Without them, he said "The day of victory will be dangerously delayed," through disruption of the war plans of the armed forces.

Rep. Taber Demands Sales Tax, Rigid Government Economy

By Francis M. Le May
Associated Press Staff Writer

A Federal retail sales tax—at a 10 per cent level and coupled with rigid curtailment of Government expenditures—was proposed yesterday by Representative Taber of New York.

Taber, ranking Republican member of the House Appropriations Committee, offered the double plan as an answer to problems of war finance.

This was the first advocacy of a sales tax by a leading Republican since President Roosevelt asked for new billions for war purposes, and it caused a stir in Capitol Hill tax circles.

The development came shortly after the House Ways and Means Committee decided to retain in the statute books, possibly with amendments, the renegotiation law for recovery of excessive profits in war contracts and voted to tighten procedures to speed enactment of a new general revenue measure by January 1.

"There is no question," Taber said in a statement, "but that we should have a sales tax—not with an idea of raising a tremendous amount of money, because it would not, but with the idea of meeting and heading off the surge of inflation.

"If we use the sales tax the least figure we could have would be 10 per cent. This probably would yield five billion dollars or less."

Taber said that enactment of a sales tax, which the Roosevelt Administration has opposed as too hard on lower-income people, would ease the pressure for upping income taxes. He added: "On most taxes you've gotten to the point where higher rates would yield little if any additional revenue."

To Last Only During War

The New Yorker would have the sales tax remain in force only for the duration of the war. Senator Byrd (Democrat) of Virginia has proposed a two-year experiment with a Federal sales tax.

Taber disclosed that he is making a special study of Federal expenditures, to determine where cuts can be made. He spoke of a possible 95 per cent reduction in Federal housing, and said the Office of Price Administration could take a 25 per cent slash.

Driving for speed in consideration of a new general revenue act, in response to an Administration request for 12 billion dollars in addition to the present annual collections of 38 billion dollars, the Ways and Means Committee decided to hear no witnesses now on four subjects:

Federal lotteries, mandatory joint returns for husband and wife and levies on municipal and State bonds, and depletion allowances for oil and minnig properties.

Hearings Start Monday

Chairman Doughton (Democrat) of North Carolina emphasized, however, that this did not eliminate these subjects from the roster for consideration later.

The committee opens public hearings on the new revenue bill next Monday, when the Treasury probably will present the Administration's tax views.

Representative Knutson (Republican) of Minnesota, Republican spokesman on the committee, said he hopes the tax-drafting group will have a new tax bill ready for the House by the first week in November, and that Congress will "put a bill on the President's desk for him to sign by January 1."

The committee referred to a subcommittee, headed by Representative Disney (Democrat) of Oklahoma, the consideration of amendments to the renegotiation law.

During long public hearings preceding this action, the committee received from the United States Chamber of Commerce and the National Association of Manufacturers recommendations that the renegotiation law be suspended or repealed, and that any excessive profits in war contracts henceforward be recaptured htrough the tax statutes.

Army Officer Killed, 6 Hurt in Crash

Baltimore, Sept. 27 (AP).—Second Lieut. Albert J. Hattman was killed and six persons were injured late yesterday when an automobile crashed into the rear of a parked car.

Police reported that Hattman, stationed at Camp A. P. Hill, Va., died in a Baltimore hospital. Officers reported he was changing a

TRAVEL SPARINGLY*

Before planning to travel, ask yourself these questions. Will this trip help Shorten the War? Is it necessary? If not, please don't go. For all available seats and berths are needed by our armed forces and those engaged in war activities. Travel Sparingly!

*Don't travel unless absolutely necessary

—but if you MUST travel you also can help solve the wartime transportation problem if you will:

- Plan every trip and buy round-trip tickets as far in advance as possible.
- Cancel your reservations promptly, if it becomes necessary to change your plans.
- Accept cheerfully the accommodations that are available.
- Travel only during the middle of the week.
- Travel light, taking only one piece of baggage on train.
- Wait your turn in the dining car patiently.

NO. 3 IN A SERIES DEDICATED TO AMERICA'S WAR EFFORT

"I am the O-P-A!"

"I'M not much on politics or fancy economics... my job is knowing how to run a farm... and that's a man-size job when there's a world-war going on. It's up to us to raise the crops and cattle... not only for our fighting men and allies, but also for the folks at home. And like every other citizen we share a joint responsibility to keep the Home-Front going... healthfully, sensibly and soundly. That's why I've made myself an Honorary Director of the O.P.A.... to make sure that the things we buy and sell are bought and sold at fair and legal prices. We can't let chiselers and black-market operators upset the apple-cart... and we're not going to. When this war's over, we don't want inflation in America... we want a sound and healthy nation... where you get a dollar's worth for a dollar. After all, the O. P. A. doesn't belong to Uncle Sam... it belongs to US... and it's up to us to make it work. Whether you're a farmer, or an office-worker, or a housewife, or a man on the production-line... you owe it to yourself and your nation to take this pledge and take it now!"

AN OPEN MESSAGE TO THE CITIZENS OF WASHINGTON

The Home Front Pledge Campaign, now in progress, is an earnest call to you to cooperate with the Office of Price Administration in its program of fair prices and a fair share of goods for all Americans. During this campaign you will be called upon to pledge not to pay more than top legal prices and not to buy rationed goods without ration stamps. Keeping this pledge will mean your active participation in this important O. P. A. program. We in the O. P. A., as part of this wartime community, pledge our complete support to this campaign. With your whole-hearted cooperation our goals will be achieved.

Robert K. Thompson, District Director,
Office of Price Administration

HERE ARE THE THINGS WE ALL MUST DO:

1. PAY NO MORE THAN TOP LEGAL PRICES.
2. ACCEPT NO RATIONED GOODS WITHOUT GIVING UP RATION STAMPS.
3. When I question any price, I will talk it over with my dealer, and if I am not satisfied, I will take my receipt to the Price Clerk of my War Price and Ration Board.
4. I will buy only what I absolutely need, so that valuable machines and labor can be used to make airplanes, tanks and guns.
5. I will volunteer my few extra hours a week to serve at my War Price and Ration Board, helping to make price control and rationing a success in my neighborhood.
6. I will help others to know their responsibilities in wartime buying and will express my disapproval, as a citizen, whenever I hear of BLACK MARKET trading in my neighborhood; and I will refuse to trade where I must break the rules.
7. I will back the attack to the best of my ability through regular purchases of war stamps and bonds.
